U. S. DENOUNCES ISLAND SEIZURE BY FREE FRENCH

Consult Canada to Restore Neutrality.

(Pictures on page 4 and back page; maps on page 4.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—The state department today indicated deep concern over the arbitrary action of the Free French government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle in seizing control of the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off the southern coast of Newfoundland.

In a formal statement, following official confirmation by Free French headquarters in London of the seizure from the Vichy government, the United States government declared that the change in status of the little fishing islands was contrary to an agreement and made without prior notification to this government.

An Arbitrary Action.

The text of the statement follows: "Our preliminary reports show that the action taken by three so-called Free French ships at St. Pierre and Miquelon was an arbitrary action contrary to the agreement of all parties concerned and certainly without the prior knowledge or consent in any sense of the United States government.

"This government has inquired of the Canadian government as to the steps that government is prepared to take to restore the status quo of these islands."

Presumably the reference was to an agreement disclosed Dec. 18 by Adm. Georges Robert, French proconsul for western hemisphere colonies, between himself and the United States providing that all French colonies in the western hemisphere would maintain neutral status. Robert, whose headquarters are on the Caribbean island of Martinique, commands St. Pierre and Miquelon.

U. S. Stand Surprises.

American opposition to the Free French move was surprising in view of current strained relations between the United States and the Vichy régime because of its close collaboration with the Nazi government. However, one explanation of the protest was that the United States still hopes to maintain satisfactory relations with the Vichy government and prevent, if possible, any disputes over jurisdiction of islands in this hemisphere which may endanger American defense.

As soon as word of the American protest over the islands' seizure was received in London, the Free French government went into immediate conference, according to a dispatch from that city. Later a statement was issued saying that Vice Adm. Emile Muselier took over the islands because their populations wanted it and he only did so after having established touch with the people of those islands. At the same time it was said that Admiral Muselier acted without the knowledge of the British, and the latter said they were astonished at the news.

Think Churchill Also Angered.

The London dispatch added that the presence of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in Washington lent weight to the seriousness of the incident, since the American statement was issued presumably with Churchill's knowledge.

The Free French were reported to have hoped that Churchill would help promote closer relations between the United States and the De Gaulle forces which have received little more than moral support from the United States so far.

Reports from St. Pierre and Miquelon on the plebiscite held there today tended to uphold the Free French claim of support in the islands. Free French rule was upheld in the two tiny islands by a 98 per cent vote.

Canada Ignorant of Plan.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 25 (AP).—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said before leaving for Washington this evening that Canada had known nothing in advance about the Free French plans to take over the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

He said, however, that so far as Canada was concerned there was no prior agreement involving the

Convoy Brings Pearl Harbor's Victims Home

The convoyed ships, wearing war paint, slipped unheralded into docks. The disembarking of wounded began immediately.

A Rush to the Dock.

Altho there was no announcement that the convoy would arrive, there was a rush to the waterfront by persons whose sons were in the battle of Pearl Harbor and whose families and relatives had been caught by the sudden outbreak of hostilities.

Ambulances moved away thru the barricades while mothers stood in a steady drizzle of rain, watching with hopeful eyes as the passengers emerged.

The evacuees soon dispersed to hotels, to homes of friends, or stations established for them.

Broadcast for Nurses.

The army nursing service broadcast an urgent appeal for trained nurses. Ambulances moved toward Letterman hospital at the Presidio with the army wounded. The navy wounded were taken to Mare Island.

Every means was used to keep morale high during the voyage. Motion pictures were shown on alternate nights and they were especially enjoyed by the wounded. Games were played and carols were sung on Christmas eve. A few gifts, prepared a week ago, were distributed.

There was an instance of grim humor. One sailor, with his right leg amputated above the ankle, saw a friend whose left leg had been similarly amputated. He sent a note which said:

"How about a dance?"

47 Children Aboard.

Mrs. Leslie Levesque, 49, whose husband died in Hawaii shortly before the Pearl Harbor attack, said there were 47 children on her ship.

"We had a Christmas party, but it was pretty sad," she related. "There were a number of widows and orphans aboard. I was alone in my home at Hickam field that Sunday the Japs came over. At first I thought they were navy planes. Then Pearl Harbor blew up. My God, I don't know what happened next."

Notes of War Correspondent from British Malayan Front

BY E. R. NODERER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KUALA KANGSAR, Malaya, Dec 24. [Delayed]—Indian troops in this sector are pulling no punches in dealing with fifth column suspects—and everyone is suspect until he proves his identity.

Accompanied by a white Indian army officer, I was arrested today while standing on a bridge, watching four Japanese bombers fly overhead.

An Indian soldier armed with a tommy gun demanded our passes and refused to be convinced of their authenticity, even when the officer spoke to him in Hindustani. "I am suspicious of all Christians," the soldier said, meaning all whites.

Another Indian sent for a white officer who came in about 15 minutes and, after questioning, released us.

The Japanese are about 30 miles away, but this distance could be covered rapidly by mechanized units in case of a break thru. Always there is the possibility of a suicide squad filtering thru the jungle or floating down the Perak river.

While standing watch from midnight to 1 a. m. there is a comforting scrape of military boots marching toward the front in the pitch dark.

Civilians armed with revolvers and rifles stopped at the rest house at 12:30 a. m. to grab a hasty meal of bully beef, biscuits, canned cake, and "stengahs," which is the eastern name for whisky and soda. They had been north doing a job of demolition.

This story is told here: A European, coming from the direction of the Japanese lines, asked British troops for permission to cross a bridge on a rubber plantation and bring a group of natives with him. He was told to advance alone. When he reached the British side he attempted to seize a tommy gun from the guard and was shot six times in the stomach. As the shots rang out, 100 Japanese soldiers opened fire from the other side of the stream. They launched rubber boats and succeeded in crossing, but were driven back by British counter attack.

When they retreated they took the body of the European with them. The British soldier believes his victim was a German.

The Chinese cooks and waiters at the resthouse cannot do too much for us. They are delighted to serve anybody they think is helping fight the hated Japanese. We have to pay for food, but they grin and tell us to sign "OGS" to chits for rooms. "OGS" means "on government service."

We drove to Taiping, which was being evacuated. While looking over the house of a friend who had asked us to see if everything was O. K., the Malayan servant from the house next door offered to kill a chicken and cook us lunch. He said his master, Dr. W. A. Balhetchet, had told him to offer hospitality to any Britishers who should come along. "Everything is free," he grinned.

I saw an air raid in Taiping. Three Japanese bombers came over. I got up from the lunch table and went outside to watch. One plane dropped three bombs. I watched them fall until they neared the ground, then threw myself on the grass. They hit stores, killing three natives, whose bodies were in the street when the correspondents went around later to inspect the damage.

As we left Taiping natives were entering stores, carrying off food and merchandise to prevent it from falling into Japanese hands. Hundreds scurried in all directions with huge bundles on their shoulders and heads.

Along the roads, steady streams of refugees, mostly Chinese, hurry southward, carrying bags of rice and a few meager possessions. Many of the women are attired in colorful pajamas. Each has a pole slung over her shoulder and from each pole hangs a bundle containing her belongings. Hundreds of refugees ride bicycles.

A British correspondent is sitting among camouflage branches. A motion picture truck spots three Japanese bombers flying south, and we hastily pull up under trees and dismount until they have gone by.

In Ipoh, we find the hotel Majestic, where we ate lunch yesterday, deserted. Guests apparently left in great haste, since there are unfinished meals and half empty wine glasses on a dozen tables in the dining room. A notice in the lobby says the hotel is closed because the native force has run away, and it is impossible to obtain supplies.

We go outside the town, and halt at airforce headquarters. Several men are sitting around with tommy guns. Headquarters says our convoy of two cars and two trucks is likely to draw the attention of Japanese bombers, so we travel on,

ARMY BOMBER SINKS JAP SUB OFF CALIFORNIA

'Direct Hit Fills Air with Debris.'

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25—A Japanese submarine was blasted "out of the water" by an American army bomber off the California coast, a war department communique announced today.

"An American army bomber," the war department said, "from Lieut. Gen. John L. Dewitt's western defense command successfully attacked an enemy submarine off the California coast. Soon after the submarine was sighted, it made an emergency dive. A bomb was dropped and the submarine emerged and then sank. Two more bombs were dropped, apparently scoring direct hits, and filling the air with debris."

Attack Near Shore.

Submarines yesterday attacked merchantmen about two miles from the Long Beach, Cal., shoreline, torpedoing a McCormick Line freighter, the Absaroka. The action was witnessed from the shore. Army bombers arrived overhead while the crippled ship was being towed to port. Two lumber schooners also were reported attacked, and one, the four masted Dorothy Phillips reached port, down by the stern. The other escaped damage, it was said.

Altho the army made no further details public it is assumed that the submarine destroyed was the one which attacked the Absaroka.

Previous successes against submarines had been announced only in general terms. Secretary of Navy Knox revealed last Sunday that up to then the navy had "probably sunk or damaged at least 14 enemy submarines" in the Atlantic and had "effectively dealt with several Japanese submarines" in the Pacific.

Other Attacks Off California.

Enemy attacks off the California coast prior to yesterday in chronological order are:

Freighter Cynthia Olson—Sunk Dec. 7 by a torpedo about 700 miles off San Francisco. Fate of crew not disclosed.

Schooner Samoa—Attacked but escaped shells and a torpedo fired at close range off California coast on Dec. 18.

Tanker Emidio—Torpedoed and shelled Saturday 200 miles north of San Francisco and 20 miles off shore. Five crewmen lost, five injured, and 36 survivors landed. Two United States bombers dropped depth charges and possibly hit the attacking submarine.

Tanker Agwiworld—Eight shells hurled at it Saturday in a 30 minute chase off Cypress Point, 100 miles south of San Francisco and 20 miles from shore, but ship zigzagged to safety.

Tanker H. M. Storey—Three torpedoes fired at it off Point Arguello, 45 miles north of Santa Barbara, on Monday but it escaped behind a smoke screen.

Tanker Montebello—Sunk by a torpedo and shells Tuesday about six miles off San Luis Obispo, Cal., all hands rescued.

Tanker Larry Doheny—Reported to have escaped an attack Tuesday in about the same general locality and time that the Montebello was sunk.

The freighter Lahaina was shelled and sunk Dec. 11 between Hawaii and San Francisco with loss of four crewmen. Thirty survivors landed at Kahului on the Island Maui.

WORD FROM MIDWAY: 'WE ARE STILL HERE, MERRY CHRISTMAS'

MIDWAY ISLAND, Dec. 25.—We are still here. Merry Christmas.

New York, Dec. 25.—Midway Island, an outpost of the United States in the Pacific which is a few hundred miles north of Wake Island, the gallant defenders of which are believed to have been overwhelmed by superior Japanese forces, still is holding out. Its garrison of marines is continuing to resist attacks.

The cheery Christmas greeting, received tonight from a resident of Midway Island which had been used as a post on the far east cable before Guam was cut off, ended a long silence.

WAR'S HIGH SPOTS IN THE FAR EAST, RUSSIA, AFRICA!

A mass of ill uniformed, untrained Japanese boys between the ages of 15 and 18 compose the advance or die army fighting toward Manila from the northwestern Lingayen area, an eyewitness account revealed yesterday.

Hundreds of them armed only with .25 caliber guns already have been killed by the American forces which are putting up a determined defense but they keep coming up and had been only partly checked up to last night.

The account of the Lingayen battle disclosed how the Japanese forces landed last Monday morning from 56 ships strung out for 25 miles about three-quarters of a mile beyond the shores of Lingayen gulf under a hail of shot and shell from American defenders along the coast and in the hills beyond. Several of the transports were sunk.

Hongkong Gives Up.

The British Hongkong garrison surrendered to the Japanese after a long fight against overwhelming odds. The Japanese said that, in effect, "the British retreated more than a thousand miles" to their next outpost at Singapore.

Battle Landing on Sarawak.

A native army rallied against the Japanese force which landed at Kuching, capital of Sarawak, British protectorate in northwest Borneo. British planes attacked Japanese transports and a Dutch submarine sank a Japanese destroyer in "Indies waters." British reported the Japanese drive down the Malay peninsula still was stemmed 300 miles north of Singapore.

Pursue Axis in Libya.

British forces in North Africa renewed their pursuit of axis forces after capturing Bengazi. Advance units were 340 miles inside Libya.

Nazi Defense Stiffens.

Moscow admitted German resistance was stiffening against the Russian counteroffensive, but claimed the Red army continued to advance. Bitter fighting raged in the Sevastopol area of the Crimea, where the Russians said they had killed 20,000 Germans while hurling back a six day assault.

Detailed war stories appear on pages 2, 3, 4, and 5.

320 HINDU CHIEFS ARRESTED UNDER DEFENSE LAWS

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—A Reuter's dispatch from Bhagalpur, India, said today that 320 Hindu leaders, including Dr. Syamprosad Mookerjee, finance minister of the Bengal government, had been arrested under the defense laws.

Dr. Mookerjee and many of the others were taken into custody en route to a Hindu conference which had been banned because it coincided with a Moslem festival and disturbances were feared, the dispatch said.

The British government estimated recently that 8,000 persons had been arrested in India for civil disobedience, many of them followers of Mohandas K. Gandhi. On Dec. 4, however, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, president of the India Congress party, and Jawaharal Nehru, its former president, were released from prison under a new government policy which has freed at least 500 such prisoners.

JAPS ADVANCE TOWARD CITY ON 3 FRONTS

Pressure by Enemy Increases.

MANILA, Dec. 26 [Friday] (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the American far eastern army defending the Philippines, today declared Manila an open city "in order to spare the metropolitan area from the possible ravages of attack either in the air or on the ground."

United States Commissioner Francis B. Sayre announced he temporarily was transferring his office outside Manila and said "we will fight to the last man."

Simultaneously, a spokesman for the United States army said this action would not affect the course of the war, which "will continue as vigorously or more vigorously than at present."

General's Proclamation.

The text of Gen. MacArthur's proclamation follows:

"In order to spare the metropolitan area from the possible ravages of attack either in the air or on the ground, Manila is hereby declared an open city without the characteristics of a military objective.

"In order that no excuse may be given for a possible mistake, the American high commissioner, the commonwealth government, and all combatant military installations will be withdrawn from its environs as rapidly as possible.

"The municipal government will continue to function, with its police powers reënforced by constabulary and troops so the normal protection of life and property may be preserved.

American Troops Tough.

"Citizens are requested to maintain obedience to the constituted authorities and continue the normal process of business."

The spokesman disclosed American troops are becoming tough.

"The situation in general is better than heretofore," the spokesman said, "as our troops are becoming hardened to combat."

A communique from headquarters of the United States armed forces of the far east said:

"Action on the northern lines is confined to artillery dueling. On the southeastern front from Atimonan to Mauban [on Lamon bay] enemy pressure is increasing. The enemy air force is very active."

Japanese tank units striking 35 miles inland from the Gulf of Lingayen last night were reported to be near the Philippine summer capital of Baguio, 130 miles northwest of Manila. A second spearhead advancing 25 miles from the coast reached Binaloan, only 110 miles from Manila after moving thru Pozorrubio.

A front line dispatch said the outnumbered American and Filipino troops fought desperately against the invaders, but acknowledged that the Japanese may already have seized Baguio in the province of that name on Luzon Island.

Withdrawal from Baguio.

Japanese forces driving southward from Aparri on the northern tip of Luzon Island were said to have reached Tuguegarao, 50 miles inland, and 215 miles north of Manila.

American troops succeeded in withdrawing from Baguio, and it was planned to declare the summer capital an open, unfortified city. Civilian officials in Baguio were ready to negotiate with the Japanese units.

Many Americans, including women and children who had intended to flee to Manila, were reported trapped by the swift Japanese drive on Baguio. Military authorities consider the city worthless except as an air base because it is surrounded by steep mountains with few roads.

Baguio is a gold mining center, but the mines have been flooded and oil supplies destroyed, so work there is impossible for many months. There is considered to be little chance of the Japanese near Baguio joining those advancing southward from Aparri.

The Japanese thrust at Binalonan apparently was the most direct menace to Manila. Binalonan is on a main highway winding thru valleys toward this capital.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander in chief, was in the field personally directing operations.

An army spokesman announced earlier that the defenders "more than held their own on all fronts."

but made no attempt to minimize the seriousness of the situation. Japanese reënforcements were landing steadily, he said.

Besides the Japanese landings on the Lingayen gulf and Aparri in northern Luzon, there was no mention today of the force which landed some time ago at Vigan, on the northwest coast.

Other Japanese landings have been effected at Atimonan and Legaspi, respectively 75 and 200 miles southeast of Manila.

[Washington, D. C., announced on Wednesday that Japanese invaders also landed at Nasugbu, 15 miles below the entrance to Manila bay, and 50 miles southwest of Manila. Another landing was effected near Mauban, on Lamon bay, 60 miles southeast of Manila.]

Communications with Davao, where the Japanese landed on Mindanao Island 600 miles southeast of Manila, have been disrupted for some time.

Adm. Thomas C. Hart, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, meanwhile announced that incomplete reports showed that American submarines had sunk a large Japanese transport and a minesweeper.

"Also I have reports of two that are probable [sinkings]," the admiral said. "One is a large seaplane tender. I believe this tender was a man of war. The other probably is another transport."

A traveler from Batangas province said he saw an American destroyer rout two Japanese destroyers in a brief offshore battle last Saturday 60 miles south of Manila.

Launch Counterattacks.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25 (AP).—A war department communique today said fierce fighting continues on all important fronts on Luzon Island of the Philippines, with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's fighting men launching counterattacks. "Local successes" were reported, particularly in the vicinity of Atimonan, 75 miles southeast of Manila. "Enemy aerial activity continued heavy, with attacks on various towns in central Luzon," the statement said.

Tokio Claims Further Gains.

TOKIO, Dec. 25 [Official Radio, Recorded by Associated Press]. — The Japanese today claimed further gains for their forces in the attacks on the Philippines.

An army communique said the Japanese had landed additional reinforcements in the Lamon bay area southeast of Manila. Troops landed at Legaspi were said to have pushed 50 miles northward, capturing Naga [about 150 miles southeast of Manila].

Troops which made the first landing at Aparri, northernmost port of Luzon, have "established a firm foothold in the Tuguegarao section," the army reported. The city of Tuguegarao is 50 miles south of Aparri and 215 miles north of Manila.

The army said the port of Davao had been occupied completely by Japanese troops landed on the island of Mindanao.

EYEWITNESS STORY

[The following dispatch reporting the fierce fighting for Manila and detailing the condition and temper of the Japanese invaders, is the first detailed account of what has been happening since Monday when Gen. MacArthur announced that 80 enemy troopships were sighted off Lingayen bay, 125 miles northwest of Manila. This story does not touch upon the latest war developments.]

BY CLARK LEE.

ON THE LINGAYEN FRONT NORTHWEST OF MANILA, Dec. 25 (AP).—The Japanese army rushing toward Manila from the Lingayen gulf area is an ill-uniformed, untrained mass of boys between 15 and 18 years old, equipped with small-caliber guns and driven forward by desperate determination to advance or die.

Hundreds of them already have died under the fire of American and Filipino artillery, machine guns and rifles, but they keep coming, and up until tonight had been only partly checked.

The American armed forces holding the Lingayen area, however, have rallied and are putting up a determined defense in many sections.

Forced to Abandon Car.

The American forces have more than held their own ground. I have spent four days in and around the fighting front, including a two-day hike over mountain trails after the Japanese cut the main road southward, forcing me to abandon and burn my automobile.

The Lingayen battle started last Monday at 2 a. m. with an artillery duel between Japanese warships and American shore guns.

At the same time a force estimated at 500 Japanese advancing southward from Vigan clashed with American armored car units at San Fernando. The Japanese, who were riding bicycles, apparently were unaware of the presence of Americans in the vicinity.

This fight continued until after dawn Monday, and the American field commander said almost every Japanese was wiped out, altho many climbed trees to continue shooting until they themselves were shot down like birds.

Transports Anchor at Night.

At sundown Sunday there were a few Japanese transports and warships along the east coast of Lingayen gulf.

The American shore forces at dawn Monday saw 56 Japanese ships, most of them small transports of about 1,500 tons each, plus a few destroyers and cruisers, anchored along the west coast from Bauang to Damortis.

The ships were in line extending for about 25 miles and were anchored about three-quarters of a mile offshore. The gulf coast in this area is sandy and shallow, with mountains four or five miles back from the shoreline.

The American artillery opened fire and sank several transports. One gunner named Johnny Jones laid two shells from a 75 millimeter gun into a transport right at the waterline, causing it to sink slowly.

Bomb American Positions.

Low-flying Japanese planes bombed and gunned the American positions, which are not continuous lines, but scattered at various strategic points along shore. The Japanese warships at that time withheld their fire.

About 7 a. m. the Japanese troops started coming ashore in small flat-bottomed motorboats with curved bows. Many were sunk by gunfire from the shore, but the others kept right on coming.

Ignoring the American fire, they swarmed on the beaches and advanced in files toward the American positions, splitting up in twos, tandem fashion.

An American officer commanding one of the beach defenses described the Japanese advance in this fashion:

"There was no hysterical exultation. They didn't charge, but crouched forward just a little bit, lifting their knees high in a sort of imitation goose-step. They kept coming forward in pairs, one directly behind the other. They were coming on to die—and many of them did.

All Types of Clothing.

"Many times one of our heavy machine gun or rifle bullets killed two men at once. When hit they just threw up their hands and fell backward as if accepting an inevitable fate.

"Some wore poor quality khaki; others wore half uniforms and half civilian clothing. Some wore sweaters and some fatigue clothes. Each had a small gold star painted on his helmet above the forehead. They carried .25 caliber rifles and about a fourth of them had .25 caliber sub-machine guns."

Unless they strike a vital spot, these .25 bullets will not kill a man. I have talked to many men who had been wounded three and four times with these bullets and still were walking about.

One Filipino member of an armored car unit was hit in the back of the head and 10 times in the back with Japanese machine gun bullets but was not critically wounded.

As the Japanese kept landing in ever larger numbers, the Americans and Filipinos drew back according to a previous plan, fighting delaying actions.

I met American defense officers Monday night at a point overlooking Lingayen gulf, lighted by burning gasoline which they had set afire to prevent it falling into Japanese hands. It was possible to count 36 Japanese ships offshore.

These officers said that prior to the landing the Japanese had bombed and strafed the Americans "for days" without damage.

The Americans said one particular flyer in a Messerschmitt [German] plane used to fly low and wave at them, and that when he came over Sunday and did a few acrobatics they thought something was up. Sure enough, they said, "this morning he came back with planes of every description, and today we have been shot at and bombed by every kind of plane and gun."

Use Smokeless Powder.

"The Japanese are using smokeless powder, which makes it difficult to detect their firing until they are very close," an American officer said. "However, they seldom have come close enough for bayonet action."

On some other fronts along Lingayen gulf the battle went better for the Americans. The Japanese were unable to blast their way ashore at Lingayen City on the southern shore and had to withdraw.

During Monday morning Filipino troops supported by American tanks checked Japanese infantry and tanks advancing inland from Damortis. The Japanese tanks were light ones and no match for the American equipment.

Late Monday afternoon, however, the Japanese renewed their attack under protection of warship gunfire and air attack, and their tanks broke thru the American lines, forcing the unit to withdraw.

The defenders had to leave clothing and food, but said they saved their guns and ammunition.

Seeks to Run Japs from Sarawak Oil Capital.

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Dec. 26 [Friday] [Official broadcast recorded by (AP)].—Forty British planes were shot down, eight others were set afire on the ground and a power plant was demolished in a mass air raid yesterday upon Rangoon, Burma, Japanese imperial headquarters said today. Eight of the Japanese planes are missing, it reported, and another was forced down in Thailand.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 25 (AP).—Hardy, barefooted Sarawak troops, descendants of Borneo headhunters, were reported rallying tonight against Japanese invasion forces which landed yesterday at Kuching, the capital of the oil rich "White Rajah" kingdom of Sarawak, North Borneo.

Sir Charles Vyner Brooke.

Communications with Kuching were blanked out, leaving in doubt the fate of the capital, which lies directly across the South China sea, 475 miles from Singapore.

Aiding in the defense of the tiny but strategically important domain, ruled by Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, British war planes and presumably Dutch submarines were reported slashing at Japanese invasion flotillas off Kuching in the south and Miri in the north.

RAF Hits Merchant Ship.

A British communique said RAF bombers in an attack on Japanese shipping anchored off Kuching scored a direct hit on a merchant ship and at least six "near misses" against other vessels. [These "near misses" could have damaged the ships].

Simultaneously, the official NEI news agency Aneta reported that a Dutch submarine torpedoed and sank a Japanese destroyer of the 2,100 ton Amagiri class. The news agency said the sinking occurred in Indies waters, which might include the general Sarawak zone. Sarawak adjoins Dutch [southern] Borneo.

Drive on Malaya Checked.

Latest official reports indicated that the Japanese drive southward down the Malayan peninsula had been stemmed 300 miles north of Singapore, with British troops now standing fast in the steaming "green hell" jungle fastnesses. "The situation remains unchanged," far east headquarters said. "There has been some dive bombing activity by enemy planes. The bombing was very haphazard, causing little damage and few casualties."

Japs Drive South.

TOKIO, Dec. 25 [Official Radio Recorded by Associated Press].—Japanese troops thrusting south into British Malaya were said in Tokio today to have occupied the west coast island of Penang, from which the British withdrew, and positions on the south bank of the Krian river. Along the east coast of Malaya Japanese forces were said to have occupied Kuala Kral, south of Kota Bharu.

A dispatch from Hankow, China, says that a large scale Japanese offensive was started last night in Kiangsi and Hunan provinces.

Field dispatches show that defenses of the Chinese 3d, 12th and 183d divisions, near the Kiangsi capital, Nanchang, "already are crumbling before the rapid Japanese advance."

U. S. Flyers Help Rout Japs.

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—The Singapore radio reported tonight that American volunteer flyers, fighting for the Chinese, had driven off 61 Japanese planes attempting to bomb Chungking.

YANKS DISH IT OUT! PEPPER JAPS WITH A POTATO BARRAGE

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 25 (AP).—The story of a fighting navy officer who ordered his men to throw potatoes at the Japanese during the attack on Hawaii was related by wounded men who arrived here today.

"Our skipper was a little fellow," a sailor said. "But he certainly was full of fight. We had only a 3 inch gun, but he wouldn't let anybody else fire it. He peppered away at the Japs as they came over.

"All of a sudden a bomb hit blew our skipper into the water. Our executive gave the order to abandon ship. We were just going down the gangway when our skipper bobbed up out of the water and hollered: "Hey, where are you fellows going?"

"We told him we were abandoning ship.

"'The hell you are!' he shouted. 'Get back to your stations!'

"So we went back and he climbed aboard and went back to his gun. Then he saw some idle men and called a messenger. He told him to go down and bring up a big sack of potatoes. The messenger didn't catch on, and the skipper yelled at him:

"'I mean potatoes. I got to keep the men occupied at a time like this. Let 'em throw potatoes at the Japs!'"

SUGGEST MEDAL FOR BOMBER HOP TO PHILIPPINES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25 (AP).—Col. Eugene L. Eubank, who commanded a 10,000 mile flight of four-engined bombers from San Francisco to the Philippines less than two months before the war broke out, has been recommended to President Roosevelt for a distinguished flying cross, the war department announced today.

The flight was the largest of its kind in history, the army said, but the number of planes was kept secret.

It followed by a month another flight which blazed a new trans-Pacific route and won distinguished flying crosses for Maj. Emmett O'Donnell Jr., and 74 officers and men under his command.

ROBBED OF GUNS AND GEMS.

Burglars took hunting rifles and jewelry valued at $300 yesterday from the home of Harry A. Shilvok at 7729 Peoria street, Shilvok reported to police. Shilvok is service manager of the South Chicago Buick plant.

JAPS CLAIM SEIZURE OF 1,400 PRISONERS IN ATTACK ON WAKE

BERLIN, Dec. 25 [Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press]. —Japanese forces, completing occupation of Wake Island, have taken 1,400 prisoners, the Tokio radio said today

The broadcast sought to correct the Japanese headquarters announcement of Wednesday by saying that the attackers found 3,000 United States marines—not 300—had been defending the tiny United States outpost and air station in the Pacific.

[On Wednesday, Washington, D. C., officials announced that the Wake Island garrison included only 385 marines. It said they had fought off 14 daily attacks thru Dec. 22 but that it was feared the island had been lost.]

THIRSTY BRITISH FORCED TO GIVE JAPS HONGKONG

Lack of Water Ends 19 Day Defense.

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—The last ditch defense of Hongkong has broken under relentless assault by land, sea, and air and the crown colony which for a century has been a British bastion off the southeast China coast has fallen to the Japanese.

"So ends a great fight against overwhelming odds," the British colonial office declared tonight, sadly announcing the surrender. No further resistance, it said, was possible.

Without estimating the figures, the foreign office asserted that "military and civilian casualties were heavy."

The announcement said lack of water was one of the great handicaps of the British Tommies, the Canadians, and the Indian Sikhs who fought step by step back across the mainland section of the colony and then held out desperately and with little hope in the fortified mountain fastnesses of the island. [Japanese estimates said the defenders numbered 20,000.]

Fall Expected for Days.

The British public had been prepared for days for word that the back-to-the-sea defense had crumbled. The word which came finally in the gray of Christmas twilight said: "The governor of Hongkong regrets that he has been advised by the military and naval commanders that no further effective resistance can be made and he is taking action in accordance with that advice.

"It will be remembered that the Japanese effected landings in strength at several points on the island on Dec. 18. To many it seemed that the end must be near; yet for seven days under relentless artillery fire not only from the mainland but from heights on the island the garrison fought on, refusing three demands to surrender.

Courage to Be Remembered.

"The water supply soon gave cause for anxiety. Important reservoirs fell into Japanese hands. Water mains were destroyed by bombardment. The public works department struggled bravely to effect a remedy but the enemy destroyed the pipes again and again. . . .

"Under the inspiring leadership of [Gov.] Sir Mark Young the morale of all was admirable. The courage and determination of the royal navy and troops from Britain, Canada, and India as well as local volunteer units, including many Chinese, will long be remembered."

Last Communique Valiant.

"The enemy made some progress during the early part of the night despite losses in the east point area.

"Heavy fighting is progressing in the direction of Happy Valley, with our troops disputing every foot of the Japanese advance. Under strong enemy pressure we successfully evacuated our forces from Repulse bay.

"A further battle is in progress for possession of Stanley peninsula."

Britain took over Hongkong island in the opium war from 1839-42 and the mainland district was ceded later by China. Hongkong island, slightly larger than New York City, had a normal population of 1,000,000 persons, approximately 20,000 of them European and American residents.

Japs Hail 19 Day Victory.

TOKIO, Dec. 25 [Official broadcast recorded by Associated Press].—Hongkong, century-old British crown colony off the China coast, was in Japanese hands tonight after a 19 day onset against the colony and 11 days of attack on its island stronghold.

Exultant Japanese radio broadcasts of the imperial headquarters announcement described the conquest as "a glowing Christmas present to the Japanese nation" and said that thus, in effect, the British "retreated more than 1,000 miles" to their next outpost at Malayan Singapore.

The army and navy made their announcement in a brief communique which said: "The enemy at Hongkong, no longer able to withstand our continuous attacks, surrendered at 5:50 p. m. [2:50 a. m., Chicago time] Dec. 25. Consequently imperial troops were ordered to cease firing at 7:30 p. m. [4:30 a. m., Chicago time]."

Domei reported that two British noncombatants brought the Japanese a message from Sir Mark Young, British governor of the colony, five hours before the actual surrender. In that message, Domei said, the governor said he was not yet willing to give up resistance. He had rejected earlier Japanese ultimatums.

After the surrender, Domei said, Sir Mark went to the Peninsular hotel at Kowloon, across Victoria harbor from Hongkong Island, for a conference on terms with Japanese army officials.

Word of the surrender was flashed to the Japanese in radio broadcasts heralded by a fanfare of martial music, and by newspaper extras issued late in the holiday night.

Mrs. Barney Offield, who lived in Pearl Harbor when the war broke out, spent Christmas day yesterday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Roman, 4209 Rose avenue, Lyons. Mrs. Offield, who is the wife of Chief Yoeman Barney Offield, now at Pearl Harbor, was evacuated from the Naval Air station in the harbor a week after the war had begun. She flew to the United States from Honolulu.

"At first we thought it was target practice," she told her parents. "But then there were continuous explosions and shelling and machine gun fire. The women at the station spent most of their time in the basement. It's no secret to say we were scared."

EXPERT WARNS: JAPS' AIR POWER IS UNDERVALUED

Tells What He Learned in 6 Years in China War.

[One of the well informed American civilians on Japanese air power is Charles Healey Day, who for six years managed an aircraft factory for the Cantonese and Nationalist Chinese governments. Bombed and machine-gunned by the Japanese, he had a first hand opportunity to observe Japanese tactics and to appraise the quality of the island empire's warplanes.]

BY CHARLES HEALEY DAY.

New York, Dec. 25 [Wide World].—If I were to be asked how American air power compares with that of Japan, I would reply that the Japanese have planes which, in quality, are nearly as good as ours. Some may be better.

I would also say that the Japanese now have more flyers than we do—an advantage to them which, I am sure, we are rapidly going to overcome.

I fear they have a large number of modern airplanes and the factory facilities to replace their losses in the air.

Jap Power Underestimated.

For a long time I have tried to keep my homeland from underestimating Japanese military power. Our complacency about what we are facing is one of our greatest enemies.

Consistently we have underrated the Japanese in the air.

There is no doubt in my mind about the ultimate result of this war with Japan. We are going to win. But I believe we are going to get bad news before we get the good news.

The Japanese have fine flyers for both their pursuits and their bombers. They have good planes. They have good engines. In all my time in China, I never heard of a Japanese military pilot having to land on account of engine failure.

When the war with China began in 1937, the Japanese had pursuits which would outclimb two to one the standard Chinese pursuit. The Japanese have vastly improved their pursuit planes since then.

Pursuits Fly 315 M. P. H.

The Chinese intelligence service informed me that Japanese heavy, twin engined bombers, used in large numbers against China, could fly 250 miles an hour. Before I left China I examined a carrier based Japanese pursuit which had been captured by the Chinese. I was told it was capable of 315 miles an hour, which is very fast for a carrier type fighter.

I first became acquainted with Japanese aviation in 1937. I had gone to Shiuchow, in Kwangtung province, as engineer in chief for the Cantonese government in 1934. When the war began I was requested by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, then secretary-general of the Chinese air force, to continue my work for the nationalist government.

We moved the factory into the interior of China.

Our first air raid at Shiuchow was on Aug. 31, 1937. The Japanese sent over their heavy, twin engined bombers from Formosa. As nearly as we could tell, they had to fly 600 miles to reach us.

American Engines Used.

The Japanese planes were unlike any that I have seen illustrated in this country. They were equipped with modern Pratt & Whitney twin wasp engines. Incidentally the Japanese had no license to manufacture those engines of American design.

Beginning in 1938 I saw repeated air raids by the Japanese involving 27 and more bombers. They have used as high as 130 on one raid. These bombers have shown consistent improvement in design. They are not copies of foreign planes. They vaguely resemble German bombers only because they use a type of flap, or air brake, and a type of slotted aileron, or wing control surface, employed by the German Junkers factories.

Learn to Guard Bombers.

The Japanese were smart. They early learned that bombers unaccompanied by protective pursuit planes were easy targets for Chinese flyers. One day we received word from Chinese intelligence officers that the Japanese were fitting their carrier based fighters with extra fuel tanks.

Within a week we had a raid in which the bombers were protected by long range, carrier based pursuits.

From time to time, Americans in China told me that, sure, the Japanese had a lot of aircraft carriers, but they were no good, they were topheavy. If that were so, it seemed singular that, at one time, the Japanese bombed us every day for six months, and sometimes twice a day, from a carrier lying at least 300 miles away.

Only One Respite.

The only letup we enjoyed was for a week or ten days when evidently the Japanese were replenishing their supplies.

Japanese bombs were unlike any I ever had seen elsewhere. They began dropping 1,000-pounders but soon abandoned that. We could tell the size and type of bombs they used by recovering the fins, on the end, which guided them to the ground. The data was stenciled on the fins.

The Japanese discovered they could do much more damage with smaller bombs. A favorite of theirs was one of 60 kilos, or 132 pounds. It dug a small, shallow crater. It flew apart, when it exploded, with tremendous effect. It had what military men call wonderful fragmentation qualities.

The tactics used by the Japanese were clever. One day I watched Japanese bombers cause an alert at Kunming, Yunnan province, at the terminus of the Burma road. The Chinese pursuits went aloft hunting.

Catch Planes on Ground.

The Japanese flew off, waited an hour until the Chinese planes were out of fuel and had to land, and then roared over to destroy the Chinese planes on the ground.

The Japanese pursuit pilot is a good flyer, as good as any I ever have seen. The Japanese bomber pilot can hold his place in a formation perfectly. The bomber pilots fear nothing. I have watched them fly right thru a rain of anti-aircraft fire without a quaver.

Their bombardiers' aim is good. I have watched a flight of 27 planes come over, 18 in one batch and 9 following about two miles behind. The 18 would drop their bombs. Smoke and dust would boil up. The 9 planes following would come over their target, circle widely, wait for the air to clear, and then drop their eggs squarely where they wanted them.

Inaccuracies Corrected.

The first wave had advised the second wave by radio of any inaccuracies in their aim and what to do to correct it.

The Japanese very effectively have shielded from us their advancements in aviation. When this war began I saw estimates published that they had only seven aircraft carriers. Then that was jumped to nine, finally to 13. You can be sure they have every one of those 13, maybe more.

We underestimated their resourcefulness, their ingenuity, their daring, their fighting qualities and their scientific achievements.

MANILA REGIME REVISED; REPORT QUEZON LEAVES

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 25.—President Manuel Quezon yesterday announced a sweeping government reorganization and was reported to have left the city for an undisclosed destination. Francis B. Sayre, United States high commissioner, also was not available. His office declined to disclose his whereabouts.

Quezon's reorganization included placing the justice department under a Supreme court justice, divorcing it from the executive branch. The functions of the interior department will be taken over by Presidential Secretary Jorge Vargas, who now becomes a cabinet member. The departments of finance, agriculture, and commerce were merged with the national defense, public works, communications and labor, and public instruction, health, and welfare departments. It was explained the reorganization will simplify top personnel.

Gasoline rationing also was announced today. The ration was set at slightly over a gallon a day.

GIVE US VICTORY! ROOSEVELT AND CHURCHILL PRAY

Attend Church Together Under Heavy Guard.

BY JOHN FISHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain today bowed their heads in prayer, asking divine guidance in leading the two great democracies to victory.

Seated together in the fourth pew of old Foundry Methodist church here, the President and Mr. Churchill led their nations in observance of the birth of Christ. In simple interdenominational services they heard prayers for an allied victory and the restoration of liberty thruout the world.

Congress to Hear Churchill.

Tomorrow they will resume their historic discussions on the course of the two allied nations in the war and Churchill at 11:30 [Chicago time] will address an informal joint session of congress, attended by the cabinet and the Supreme court.

The President and prime minister were accompanied to the services by Mrs. Roosevelt, Lord Beaverbrook, British minister of supply, and flanked by high military and naval leaders of the two nations, including Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff; Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, deputy chief of staff for air; Adm. Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Adm. Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord of the British admiralty; Sir Charles Portal, British air chief marshal; and Sir John Dill, former chief of staff of the British army.

Church Heavily Guarded.

The church was heavily guarded by the secret service, soldiers, and police, with extreme precautions taken against any demonstration. Admission to the church was limited to those holding special cards.

"Those nations which cling to democracy are challenged today as never before to preserve the innocence of children, the nobility of womanhood, the chivalry of manhood and to bring back the ideals of the home," said the Rev. Dr. ZeBarney T. Phillips, chaplain of the senate and dean of the Washington cathedral, who delivered the sermon. "Those things," he added, "are at stake today. Who would hesitate to enter the lists? We pray God that each man will have the strength of 10."

"A common sorrow makes the world akin," he continued. "It is fitting on this anniversary of the Savior's birth that we all bow down and have the spirit of Christ enter into us lest we be not strong enough to protect the weak."

Prayers for Leaders.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, minister of Foundry church, prayed that "our nation hold aloft the torch of freedom." In praying for Mr. Roosevelt, Dr. Harris said: "For all freedom loving people he has sounded a trumpet that shall know no retreat." He prayed for Mr. Churchill "as he leads his people thru 'blood, sweat, and tears'."

Of the brave American and British forces engaged with the enemy, the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, said:

"We send our Christmas greeting to our men in the combat zones around the world. Bless them every one. We pledge them our love, our prayers and our best efforts."

Tribute to Mother.

The hymns sung were "Joy to the World," "Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Dear Country of Our Love and Prayer." On the altar of the church the President and Mr. Churchill saw flowers placed there "in memory of that elect lady, Sara Delano Roosevelt, the queenly mother of our President, on this the first Christmas 'away' from her loved ones."

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill listened attentively to the ministers and joined in singing the old, familiar Christmas hymns. They responded generously to the offering for underprivileged children. Once while the doxology was changed, Mr. Churchill turned to face the congregation which had strained for a glimpse of their distinguished visitor.

Mr. Roosevelt occupied the right end of the fourth center pew. Mr. Churchill sat on his left, and Mrs. Roosevelt was between the prime minister and Lord Beaverbrook. Others in the official party filled in reserved pews behind. Among the guests who arrived earlier were Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones.

Meet Today in Senate.

The 126 year old church which the British officials visited was named "Foundry" because the land on which it is located was donated to the church by Henry Foxall, an English born American patriot, in gratitude for the preservation of his foundry during the British invasion of Washington in 1814. The minister, Dr. Harris, was a guest in Buckingham palace in 1937 and was a close friend of the late Lord Stamp, English economist.

The informal joint session of congress tomorrow, which the President is also expected to attend, will be held in the senate chamber rather than in the house, usual scene of such sessions, because so many congressmen have returned to their homes for the holidays. Those nearby have been urged to return, however, for the occasion.

Similar appearances before congress have been arranged for distinguished visitors previously, including the late Ramsey MacDonald, while prime minister of Great Britain; Charles A. Lindbergh and the late Wiley Post, aviators, and during the first World war by the late King Albert of the Belgians, and French Marshall Joffre.

Canada's Chiefs on Way.

SEPARATE AIR FORCE URGED BY M'CARRAN; OFFERS LEGISLATION

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25 (AP).—Sen. Pat McCarran [D., Nev.] announced today that he would seek congressional creation of a separate air force early in 1942. War developments in the Pacific, he asserted, had demonstrated the need for such a realignment in the armed forces.

McCarran said he had obtained assurances from Chairman Robert N. Reynolds [D., N. C.] that the senate military committee would begin hearings soon on his bill to set up a separate, unified air command.

His bill would establish a new department of aviation, which would take over the present army air corps and the naval flying corps, except for commissioned officers. The President would be authorized to assign the air force or navy forces, or independently, as strategic considerations might dictate.

WARSHIPS BASED AT PEARL HARBOR READY FOR JAPS

Admiral Declares Force in Excellent Shape.

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Dec. 25 (AP).—An admiral in command of a combat force of United States warships said today that "the lesson of the Dec. 7 attack has been taken to heart."

"We now are well up to strength in all our units," he added, "and the men want only one thing—to get at the enemy."

The admiral received reporters aboard his flagship, which was only slightly damaged in Japan's sudden aerial assault against Oahu Island. His voice was almost drowned out by the whining saws and pounding hammers of the busy harbor. There wasn't a sign of Christmas anywhere. It was like any other sunny morning at this naval base—any other except one.

Ghost Ships Visible.

Dimly visible in the distance the forms of two sunken ships stuck out of the water. Closer by were the charred destroyers Cassin and Downes.

The admiral summed up the reaction of the men:

"We know that somebody's done us a dirty trick and we want to get back at them. Our one desire is to get up and sock 'em for that treacherous attack. Nearly everybody wants to be a machine gunner."

"My ships all are ready to fight," he said, and added that damage to cruisers was only "incidental."

Man Power Replenished.

"We have already received more men from the mainland than were lost in the attack—we're better off today than we have been in some time."

He said the raid "brought home the necessity of taking utmost precautions," explaining that when "men drill now they know more about what it means—more than just going thru motions."

The admiral refused to discuss naval strategy but asserted flatly "it is going to be a long war—must be, with the enemy as far away as Japan."

U. S. TO AUSTRALIA RADIO-TELEGRAPH SERVICE OPENED

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—[Special]—Direct radiotelegraph communication between the United States and Australia went into effect tonight for the first time when the Radio Corporation of America opened a circuit between San Francisco and Sydney with an exchange of greetings between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister John Curtin.

"In bringing this service into operation," the prime minister's message said, "my government recognizes the necessity for applying efficient scientific methods of linking the two countries for common defense in the Pacific, also for trade and intercourse and mutual understanding."

"Mr. Churchill, who is staying with me," the President's message said, "joins me in these greetings and we give you our assurance that we consider the safety of your commonwealth as a definite essential in every plan of offensive action against our common foes."

All telegraphic communications between the United States and Australia had previously been handled via Canadian or British routes.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 25 (AP).—British troops have taken over the ruins of Bengazi, capital of Cirenaica and second largest town in the Fascist North African empire, and air and land forces are hammering on in relentless pursuit of axis forces fleeing westward into Tripolitania, a communique announced today.

Capture of the seaport, with its strategic control of the military road and short railway lines into Libya, gave the British control of all of Cirenaica except for some pockets of enemy resistance.

Military observers estimated most of the tanks of Gen. Erwin Rommel's Libyan force had been wiped out. The wreckage of the Nazi leader's equipment was strewn all along the route of retreat. Some machines were captured intact, including many which had been left in repair shops at Derna.

The question now uppermost here is whether the British will drive on to Tripoli before the Germans get reinforcements there. Mostly Italian infantry opposes the British path now, it was said.

Find City a Wreck

Bengazi, first captured Feb. 7, 1941, by the British but lost two months later to an axis counterdrive, was a wreck when the first royal dragoons entered it yesterday.

[A military commentator in London said it appeared that Bengazi had been evacuated by the Italians and tell without opposition since a single regiment apparently entered alone. He said the devastation might have been caused by the Italians blowing up buildings before leaving or possibly from repeated British air raids on the town.]

Occupation of the harbor brought the British advance 340 miles by road from the Egyptian frontier and 250 miles from Tobruk.

Thru rain and mud British mobile columns bypassed the town to press after the main axis forces.

Some British observers said the retreating Germans appeared to have been separated into several relatively small contingents, while the whole of the Italian force seemed to have been cut off from all possible retreat.

Believe Some Nazis Escaped.

Some of the Germans, it was conceded, possibly got past the main British force which raced across the desert to intercept them before they could swing west from Agedabia toward Tripolitania.

The British communique said, 'Small bodies of enemy troops, believed almost entirely Italian, still remain in the area northeast of Bengazi and are being dealt with."

British planes pounded at airdromes and motorized convoys racing toward Tripolitania. As troops took over former axis airdromes they found the wrecks of planes caught by the royal air force before they could leave the ground.

Claim British Destroyer Sunk.

BERLIN, Dec. 25 [Official broadcast recorded by Associated Press].—The German high command today declared a British destroyer had been sunk off the Libyan coast as sharp fighting continued in North Africa. An air raid on British Malta also was reported.

British Repulsed, Says Rome.

ROME, Dec. 25 [Official broadcast recorded by Associated Press].—British forces led by strong armored car and tank formations were declared by the Italian high command today to have been repulsed in an attempt to overrun the region of Bengazi. The German air force was said to have destroyed enemy armored cars and guns.

Repeated attacks against the Libyan-Egyptian frontier posts of Solium and Bardia were declared to have been repulsed with heavy British losses.

The high command said that, "In the central Mediterranean British sailors from the cruiser Neptune, mentioned Dec 19, were rescued. They were found near our shores, brought in by the tide." [Italians claimed Dec. 19 that five British cruisers had been torpedoed by axis planes in the Mediterranean.]

Free French Take Over Coastal Islands

Yesterday it was confirmed that Muselier had led an expedition which took possession of the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off Newfoundland. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

dominion regarding maintenance of the status quo of the islands.

C. C. Ebert, acting Canadian consul at the islands, notified Ottawa of the seizure a few hours before Free French headquarters in London announced it.

Taken by Surprise.

"We were taken completely by surprise," an external affairs department spokesman said. "Altho Adm. Muselier was in Ottawa recently, we never were told that the Free French planned taking such action."

Vice Adm. Emile Muselier, commander of the Free French naval forces, headed the ships which entered the islands yesterday.

DESCRIBES SEIZURE

St. Pierre, Dec. 25.—(AP)—The four Free French ships which occupied the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon yesterday were part of a group of Free French naval vessels which left an eastern Canadian port Monday for maneuvers on the high seas, and then suddenly slipped away on their mysterious mission, it was disclosed today.

Jean le Bret, a reporter for the Montreal newspaper Le Jour, told the following story of the occupation thru the services of the Free French information service here:

"Under the orders of Vice Admiral Muselier, commander-in-chief of the naval forces of Free France, who was on a tour of inspection of French ships participating in the battle of the Atlantic, a detachment of the French naval forces appeared Monday at noon at an eastern Canadian port for maneuvers on the high seas. I was a passenger on a corvette.

Disappear on Mission.

"That evening, at the signal of the admiral, four ships formed in line and disappeared into the darkness. During the whole day Tuesday these four ships followed their mysterious route.

"Sometime before dawn the flotilla stopped. In the obscurity and silence the men began to organize for action.

"To starboard one could see the white of snow on the abrupt cliffs of St. Pierre. To port one could see in the shadows still confused, little Miquelon.

"All the crews were at their posts. The admiral gave the order: 'Execute the mission given you.'

"Soon the entrance to the little port of St. Pierre, Le Barachois," appeared on the horizon. As the corvette at the head of our column advanced into the harbor, the pilot boat came out and placed itself at the disposition of the French ensign.

"Raising the Cross of Lorraine, the two first corvettes steamed toward the quays of Douane and La Ronciere.

"Another stopped at the head of the bridge at the coal quay; and the last acted as a rear-guard.

Landing Units Debark.

"At the same time all the landing detachments debarked with their arms and set out on their different missions.

"A morning crowd ashore was taken by surprise but was happy and enthusiastic.

"Quickly all strategic points were occupied."

Military Value Small

St. Pierre and Miquelon, the largest islands of two tiny groups lying 15 miles off southern Newfoundland, are French new world outposts having a total area of only 93 square miles and a total population of about 5,000.

The status of St. Pierre and Miquelon has been a subject of discussion ever since Canada went to war, lying as they do definitely within Canadian defense waters. Canada unofficially has taken the position that the islands have little military value.

An Ottawa spokesman said last May 15 that regardless of what happens in France, the islands lie within Canada's defense area and that it was difficult to see how they could be of any practical use to the enemy, regardless of who had nominal control of them.

The islands mostly are barren rock and are unsuited to agriculture. The chief industry is cod fishing.

Last Aug. 26 Canada decided to open a consulate at St. Pierre, capital of the group, "to keep more closely in touch with developments in the islands."

ARMY LAYS PHONE LINES IN FIELDS AS TRUCK SPEEDS

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special].—A new wire thrower designed to speed up the laying of field wire in maintaining communications under combat conditions has been developed by the signal corps, the army announced today. With the new device wire can be thrown from a moving vehicle as far as 125 feet while the vehicle is moving as fast as 35 miles an hour.

Wire can be laid faster and placed farther off the road by using the wire thrower, it was explained. Field wire formerly has been laid and recovered by signal corps troops with a unit mounted on a vehicle and possessing a power drive for reeling out and recovering wire from directly behind the vehicle.

A QUIRK OF WAR: BRITISH FIGHT TO RESCUE ITALIANS

Save Colonists from Arab Bandits in Libya.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH BRITISH ADVANCE FORCES IN LIBYA, Dec. 23.—[Delayed].—The troops with whom I am traveling today took part in an engagement which demonstrated the strange situation existing in Libya. We helped Italian civilians fight off an Arab bandit attack on their farm house.

The Arabs have been friendly toward the British since they have been driving out the Italians, who had been extremely cruel to the Arabs.

Rolling along a coastal road near Barce, about 50 miles northeast of Bengazi [which the British now have captured] we were hailed by Italian colonists over whose house flew a white flag of surrender. Inside the house a lone British soldier was defending the Italians against Arabian bandits. The soldier had stopped at the house to buy eggs when the Arabs attacked. He posted himself at a window with a submachine gun and held off the initial assault. As we arrived a second attack began, but our party flanked the Arabs and they quickly retreated when they found they were facing automatic weapons.

Arabs Help British Flyers.

Another side of the picture shows the remarkable friendliness of the Arabs toward the British. Yesterday we picked up three young royal air force sergeants whose plane had been forced down. Arabs found them, guided them across the hills, fed them, and hid them when the enemy was near. The flyers did not know they had been safely escorted past the enemy lines until they sighted our cars.

Before my brush with the Arab bandits I saw a graphic picture of the haste with which the axis forces are fleeing before the British advance. Scattered along the road west from Tobruk I saw the debris of a great retreat. As usual, the Italians had left behind masses of papers, letters, and clothing. To these characteristic signs of an Italian flight were added the German debris—field guns, antitank guns, smashed tanks, and burned out trucks.

At Tobruk I saw great devastation. Wreckage was strewn the length of the harbor. Smashed buildings, wrecked vehicles, huge shell craters, and heaps of cartridge cases provided mute evidence of the bitter fight that went on around Tobruk before the enemy retreated. The only thing which remained untouched by the war was a billboard advertising Italian cognac.

Find Water, Gardens at Derna.

As they moved across the last section of the desert, the British troops were delighted to find drinking water, green trees, and gardens of cabbage and broccoli in Derna. The British forces which took Derna found 100 wounded British soldiers in a pitiful state in a hospital. The prisoners said they had been well treated until the Germans pulled out, two days before the British forces arrived. After that, they said, the Italians gave no care to either them or their own wounded.

As the battle moved westward, local inhabitants began to appear for the first time. In the old battle regions near the Egyptian frontier there were no inhabitants, since it is desert country and the wandering Bedouins had been moved out of the war zone. Around Derna, however, we met groups of Arabs with their donkeys and camels.

While Derna is free of the sandstorms which plague the advancing British army, because it is sheltered by a high escarpment, the nearby regions often are full of swirling clouds of sand. I had one brush with a sandstorm when a British flyer took me along on a flight in front of the lines. Flying low to avoid attracting enemy aircraft, his visibility suddenly was blotted out by the sand. He had to circle for 40 minutes before he was able to find a break in the sand and orient himself.

KING GEORGE URGES UNITY AND SACRIFICE, PRAISES FAMILY LIFE

LONDON, Dec. 25—King George VI, delivering his third wartime Christmas broadcast to the empire today, spoke from his home in the English countryside, with his wife and children near by, and stressed the value of family life in this season and in the world as it is today.

"Christmas is a festival of home, and it is right we should remember those who this year must spend it away from home," he said.

"All these separations are part of the hard sacrifice which war demands. It may well be it will call for even greater sacrifices. If this is to be, let us face them cheerfully together.

"I think of you as one great family, for that is how we are learning to live. We all belong to each other. We all need each other. It is in serving each other and sacrificing for our common good that we are finding our true life."

REPORT NAZI SPY CENTER BROKEN BY ISLES' SEIZURE

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Free French occupation of the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon—unauthorized tho it may have been—has broken up a spy center which for months has been endangering every convoy sailing toward Britain from the western hemisphere, authoritative quarters said tonight.

A powerful radio station on the Island of Miquelon, they said, has flashed messages to occupied Europe giving details about every convoy of which Vichy collaborationists could get word.

It has been a long-standing wonder in British naval circles, these sources said, why this spy nest on the edge of Britain's main highway from the United States and Canada was allowed to remain free to operate.

Farmer Suffocated Under 7 Foot Pile of Soy Beans

Carl H. Woesthoff, 32 years old, was suffocated yesterday when a 7 foot pile of soy beans poured over him on his farm on Naperville road in Wheatland township, Will county. The body was found by his father, Henry Woesthoff, after Carl failed to return from his chores. Deputy Coroner Willard Blood said the younger Woesthoff apparently stumbled and dislodged the pile of beans from their bin.

REDS ADMIT NAZI LINES STIFFENING, BUT PUSH GOES ON

MOSCOW, Dec. 25 (AP).—Stiffening German resistance to the Russian counteroffensives on the Moscow, Leningrad, and Ukraine fronts was acknowledged in front line dispatches tonight, while in the Crimea a fierce battle raged as the Germans strove to batter their way thru the last defenses of besieged Sevastopol.

However, the midnight communique said Red forces on the western, Kalinin, and southwestern fronts "continued to advance, occupying a number of villages."

By Russian count, at least 20,000 Germans—or about half the Nazi forces on the Sevastopol front—were killed in a six day battle which the Russians said failed to crack their resistance before the big Black Sea naval base.

Russian successes on the central front continued and the soviet information bureau announced that in the 5 day period of Dec. 21 to 25 a total of 10,220 Germans were annihilated.

Tell of Heavy Nazi Losses.

Elsewhere, the Russians acknowledged that the retreating Germans had recoiled with counterattacks which, tho strong, failed to halt the soviet advances and incurred only new, heavy losses particularly on the north and south flanks of the Moscow defense arc.

In a fresh flurry of aerial warfare, nine German planes were reported shot down on the approaches to Moscow on Christmas eve. The total of German planes destroyed yesterday was put at 34, with loss of 11 Russian craft admitted.

The Russians reported that Red army troops were pressing forward from Tula, 110 miles south of Moscow, and from Kalinin, 95 miles northwest.

A German battalion which attempted to check the soviet march in the Tula region by organizing a circular defense was declared to have been wiped out, with the Nazis leaving 300 dead on the battlefield.

Gain on Central Front.

Red army gains were also reported in the center of the Moscow front, where a battle has been raging in the Mozhaisk and Maloyaroslavets sectors, respectively 57 and 65 miles west of Moscow. One Rusian unit was said to have killed 600 German soldiers in a single day's fighting.

"German soldiers taken prisoners during the last few days testify to the great losses sustained by the German armies and to further deterioration of the German fighting spirit," a communique said.

A Yule Card for Hitler.

Red Star, the army newspaper, published its own Christmas card, portraying Santa Claus handing Hitler a calendar with the date Dec. 22. The caption said:

"Congratulations, Herr Fuehrer! Today is just six months since the start of your six week march on Moscow."

The supplement to the midnight communique said that in one sector the headquarters of the 267th German infantry regiment were destroyed, along with large quantities of war material, including 270 motor vehicles and 15 guns.

Yesterday the Red air force was declared to have destroyed on the central sector 12 German tanks, 400 vehicles, 426 motor cars, four guns, nine antiaircraft guns, and 135 cases of ammunition. A rail line was wrecked by the soviet flyers at three points, the communique said, and three detachments of infantry and one squadron of cavalry were scattered.

With the German menace to Moscow receding, 30 Americans and Britons, who had returned to the capital, celebrated Christmas as guests of the American embassy staff members who remained at the Spaso, the embassy residence, when the Moscow diplomatic corps withdrew to Kuibyshev.

NAZIS "DESTROY 21 TANKS."

The German communique yesterday reported violent fighting continued along the entire soviet front and said 21 Russian tanks were destroyed at one point by German planes. Other planes were said to have raided troop concentrations. Numerous Russian transport columns were reported heavily damaged east of Tikhvin [on the northern front].

DROP RUMANIAN FROM NAME OF CONGREGATION

The word Rumanian has been removed from the name of what was formerly the First Rumanian congregation, 3622 Douglas boulevard. This action by vote of the congregation, announced yesterday by Max Swartz, president of the synagogue, came as a result of the recent declaration of war against the United States by Rumania. The congregation was founded 45 years ago by Rumanian Jewish immigrants and has become one of the largest in the Lawndale area. Rabbi H. Goldstein is the spiritual leader of the congregation. Swartz said the congregation also voted to "use every dollar it can to support the government in the war against all aggressor nations."

Careful Escape Plan Fails to Help Robbery Suspect

In spite of a carefully planned escape, Emmerson Bolton, 36, Negro, wound up in Wabash avenue station last night, held for Gary, Ind., authorities, who were said to want him for a number of minor robberies. He was arrested in his apartment at 123 East 49th street for questioning, faked a suicide by poison on his way to jail in the patrol wagon, and escaped after kicking a policeman. He was rearrested later at his home, still wearing handcuffs.

FLEEING NAZIS HIT BY A BARRAGE OF RED PROPAGANDA

[Copyright: 1941: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Dec. 25.—Russia's Christmas message to the German people took the form of a series of grim postcards, with forged stamps, which presumably were smuggled into Germany and posted by agents there.

One card illustrates a Christmas tree, at the foot of which lies the body of a German soldier. Another, entitled "Living Space in the East," shows a long vista of wooden crosses, each surmounted by a German army helmet, over which circle carrion birds.

The Russians have adopted a password for Germans wishing to surrender and new propaganda leaflets advise the Germans to use the phrase in the Russian language. During the summer of 1918, when the Germans were retreating on the western front, British intelligence officers found that leaflets giving precise details about the various sectors had a serious effect on the enemy's morale. Similarly the Russian leaflets now give details of the German losses in various sectors.

Leaflets Carry Roosevelt Speech.

Among the other information distributed to the retreating enemy soldiers are President Roosevelt's message to congress on the occasion of Japan's attack and foreign press comments concerning the recapture of Rostov. The leaflets also are supposed to serve as a safe conduct ticket for German deserters.

Much play is made in the propaganda of American and British aid to Russia, one pamphlet illustrating an American plane in the Russian air force.

Other leaflets which are dropped by plane behind the enemy lines use photographs of families of Germans found dead on the battlefield, with such captions as this:

"For this woman there is no happy Christmas—for this child on his father's knee. She is a widow and he is fatherless."

Communists Appeal to Nazis.

"Long live Moscow; down with Hitler."

The central committee of the German communist party, now in Russia, has published a pamphleted appeal to the German people and army.

Stressing the hepelessness of Germany's position and Russia's great strength, the committee calls on the German people to save Germany before it is too late, warning:

"The German people's only salvation is to end the war. This means liquidating Hitler. Woe to the German people if they remain linked with Hitler to the end, if they do not restore order to Germany themselves, but leave that to other people.

"The German people want a country where honest, hard working folk can live. Unless you act now, you risk a destruction of the German army and the German reich more complete than in 1918."

DREAD BALLOON BARRAGES SHORN OF DEADLINESS

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON [By Air Mail].—German air attacks on Britain and British air attacks on Germany have revealed that both sides are using apparatus designed to break thru balloon barrages in order to reach their objectives.

It is announced in London that captured German aircraft have been found to be fitted with special fenders to ward off the balloon barrage cables. British aircraft do not carry fenders, but have a special cable cutting device which is much lighter than fenders and does not reduce the aircraft's speed in any such proportion.

Britain's balloon barrages have been costly, but appear to have justified the expenditure on them. All that has been said about barrage balloons is that they cost a minimum of $3,200 each. It is known that there are several thousand of them, so it can be assumed that between $32,000,000 and $40,000,000 has been spent on them. This, of course, does not include their upkeep.

No Novelty About Fenders.

There is no novelty about the fenders found on German aircraft, it is reported here, and their disadvantages are numerous. As long ago as 1917 similar devices were being developed by the royal flying corps. In that war Air Vice Marshal R. M. Hill deliberately flew his fender-equipped plane into a balloon cable. The aircraft was thrown into a spin, but the fender protected it and he was able to right the machine and make a normal landing.

The German fenders weigh between 600 and 800 pounds. They cause extra air resistance which slows down the aircraft by about 25 miles per hour. Cable cutters on British planes, however, have little adverse effect upon speed, experts say.

Figures on the aerial offensive against Germany show that during August, September, and October, 10,000 tons of explosives were dropped on the enemy by aircraft of the bomber command. This is about equal to the bombings of a comparable period last summer.

Weather Curbs Activities.

The British bomber offensive, according to this statement, has been pressed to the utmost, consistent with the weather conditions. On 15 days and 12 nights in October, British aircraft could not operate, yet in that month the British bomber effort was nearly double what it was in far better weather during October, 1940.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 sorties have been carried out by bomber and reconnaissance planes against the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen since they have been tied up on the west coast of France. As a result they have been kept off the Atlantic for seven months.

Over 300 attacks on enemy shipping were carried out by the bomber, fighter, and coastal commands in October, an average of 10 a day—and an RAF record.

SINK NAZI TANKER AFTER 30 HOUR ATTACK FROM AIR

British Warplanes Blast Ship in Relays.

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—The story of a 30-hour pursuit of a German tanker, possibly a submarine tender, with its eventual sinking off Spain under attack by relays of various types of British aircraft, was told in an air ministry communique this afternoon.

Cross marks scene of Nazi tanker sinking.

The sinking of the ship off Spain's north coast yesterday was first announced early today. [Berlin said the German steamer Benno had been sunk Wednesday off Vivero, Spain.]

"The tanker was first sighted out in the Atlantic at breakfast time on Tuesday by a Sunderland [flying boat] from a royal Australian air force squadron," said the British communique.

Flying Boat Attacks Ship.

"The Sunderland attacked with bombs. One member of the Sunderland's crew reported that as the flying boat went into the attack he noticed a suspicious swirl in the water which might have been caused by a U-boat submerging after refuelling from the tanker."

The pursuit was continued by other long range aircraft of the coastal command, including Catalinas. One Catalina encountered a Heinkel seaplane which apparently had been sent to escort the tanker, but fought off its attack.

Oil Trail Gets Wider.

"Early Wednesday morning a Whitley picked up the tanker again. It was steaming at reduced speed. The Whitley attacked. As the explosions subsided the tanker was seen to be slowing up still further, and a trail of oil which had marked its course thruout the night suddenly was extended.

"It was obviously in considerable difficulties. The chase then was taken up by a Beaufort from a squadron which had frequently taken a toll of enemy shipping during recent weeks. The pilot found the tanker in the afternoon and hit it with his torpedo."

Call It "Neutrality Violation."

BERLIN, Dec. 25.—[Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press.]—The German steamer Benno was sunk yesterday afternoon by British bombers in Spanish territorial waters. Six bombs hit the ship off Vivero, northwestern Spain.

The German news agency compared the attack with British destroyer action against the German prison ship Altmark in Norwegian waters Feb. 16, 1940.

German news agency reports from Madrid said the attack on the Benno caused greatest indignation in Spanish naval quarters as well as among the general public.

SAILORS ALERT AFTER CHICAGO RAID WARNING

Holiday Observance Is Delayed for Hour.

Sailors in the Chicago area rushed to defense stations yesterday afternoon after the first air raid alert was sounded at the Great Lakes Naval Training station, the naval reserve aviation base, Glen View, the navy service school on Navy pier, and the Chicago naval reserve armory.

Commander Carr.

The air raid siren which sounded at 1 p. m., blacked out the Great Lakes station in the midst of a Christmas show, and hundreds of sailors were sent to air raid shelters. The recruits continued to sing carols and navy songs during the blackout.

Official notice of the alarm was given out by Commander T. De Witt Carr, executive officer of the Great Lakes station.

Planes Over Lake.

"The alarm," said the notice, "was sounded about 1 p. m. following a warning from a responsible source that eight to twelve unidentified planes coming from the northeast were heading west across Lake Michigan.

"There was no word of United States planes in flight at the time and in view of the mysterious circumstances surrounding the strange planes the alarms were given. Navy patrol planes were sent up to carry out defense assignments if necessary.

"The warning found every one alert and ready for any eventuality. All navy personnel carried out their duties and stood by during the alert. Following the all-clear signal they returned to their usual duties or entertainments at stations and bases. All-clear was given at 2:10 p. m.

Practice air raid alerts have been held in various cities and, altho no navy official would comment on this possibility, the alarm here was believed to have been a practice test.

Third Alarm at Station.

The blackout was the third for the Great Lakes station. The first was put into effect at the station of 200 buildings and 500 acres in September, 1940, and the second a week ago.

Rear Admiral John Downes has asked towns in the vicinity to coöperate with the Great Lakes in blackouts after plans have been made for such a step. He said that with the surrounding communities lighted that Great Lakes "sticks out like a sore thumb." He suggested that the blackout area extend from the southern limits of Lake Forest to the state line, and west to Libertyville.

U. S., CARIBBEAN OIL HELD AMPLE FOR ALLIED USE

New York, Dec. 25 [Special].—Domestic fields and those operated by United States nationals in the Caribbean area will be able to supply the combined demands of the democracies for all oil needed for war and civilian uses, the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, reported today in its publication, the Lamp.

The publication said that altho the problem of transportation is troublesome, 188 high-speed tankers are under construction by the oil industry and the maritime commission for completion in 1942 and 1943. This carrying capacity was said to be equivalent to 80 per cent of the current United States flag tanker tonnage.

By the fourth quarter of 1942 tanker tonnage in the allied countries will reach a level in excess of any tanker losses which axis aircraft and submarines have been able to inflict thus far, the Lamp said.

HEAR INFLUENZA HITS GERMANS ON LENINGRAD FRONT

[Copyright: 1941: By the New York Times.]

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 25.—In addition to an epidemic of spotted typhus on the northern front, reports from Helsingfors, Finland, and Stockholm, Sweden, today told of an outbreak of Spanish influenza among German soldiers on the Leningrad front. Mortality was said to be "inordinately high." A Swedish correspondent reported from Berlin that many cases had been noted there, apparently contracted from men allowed to return for Christmas.

Altho the outbreak in Berlin appears to be well in hand, authorities were reported to be concerned over the possibilities of an epidemic. Should one occur, it was said, it would wreak havoc on the civilian population.

Quarantine Lithuanian Districts.

New York, Dec. 25 (AP).—The British radio reported tonight that typhus was so prevalent in Lithuania that whole districts had been quarantined and the Germans were taking stringent measures to combat the dread disease in all the Baltic states and in the Ukraine.

New York, Dec. 25 (AP).—The British radio, quoting the German radio, reported tonight that Adm. Jean Darlan, vice premier of the Vichy French government, has gone to Toulon, France's big Mediterranean naval base, where several major units of the French fleet are tied up.

BUICK AIRCRAFT ENGINE PROGRAM TO BE DOUBLED

Plant in Melrose Park to Be Expanded.

The Buick division of General Motors corporation will double its vast aircraft engine production program, a move which will mean an approximate doubling of output in the company's big Melrose Park plant, it was disclosed last night.

Harlow H. Curtice.

Harlow H. Curtice, Buick president, announced in Flint, Mich., that the army air corps had approved the expansion and that the company is moving immediately to put the authorization into effect. Aircraft engine plants in Melrose Park and Flint eventually will employ 25,000 or 30,000 workers, he said.

Space to Be Increased.

Dale E. Williams, operations manager in Melrose Park, said the plant's space will be increased substantially, but that definite information on the new buildings is not available. Employment at the plant, at North avenue and La Grange road, will be increased above the 10,000 workers previously planned, he said.

Curtice said manufacturing operations have been under way for several weeks in Melrose Park, where construction of facilities is near completion. This plant now includes a main building more than 1,300 feet long and 750 feet wide, and a number of smaller structures.

Assemble Engines Here.

The plane engines are assembled and tested in Melrose Park. Parts are produced there, in Flint and in other factories.

The expansion marks the second time Buick's engine production program has been doubled.

Cost of the latest expansion was not disclosed. The announced cost of facilities before the newest expansion was 41 million dollars. This included the Melrose Park plant, which was allotted most of the total, and conversion of two automotive factories in Flint into aircraft engine plants.

Curtice said all resources of the company have been thrown into the development of defense work, including construction of M-1 and M-4 tanks.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO BE PREPARED FOR AIR ATTACKS

Maj. Raymond J. Kelly, director of civilian defense for the 6th corps area, announced yesterday a program for the conduct of school teachers and pupils during air raids. It included the following:

School fire alarms should be rung in a special manner to denote air raids, and classes proceed to designated refuges in the building. Frequent drills should be held. The top floor should be avoided.

Children should be kept away from windows and open doors. Fire extinguishers should be inspected regularly, and fire wardens are to be chosen from among the pupils and assigned certain posts.

Authorities should appoint building wardens, establish systems for transmitting warnings to schools, and insure construction of protective devices such as sandbags and building reinforcements. Pupils should be kept busy during raids, and teachers should know their duties thoroly.

ATTY. GEN. BIDDLE WARNS AGAINST OVERCONFIDENCE

New York, Dec. 25.—(AP)—Attorney General Francis Biddle told the nation today neither to "overestimate our capacities to do the job that lies ahead nor underestimate the evil strength of our adversaries."

Biddle spoke from Washington on a radio "Victory Roll Call" of spokesmen for nations fighting the Axis powers. The program was broadcast throout the world by shortwave.

The only woman speaker, Madame Ivy Litvinoff, wife of the soviet ambassador, praised the role played by women in the war and said the fight for democracy was as important to them as to men.

FINDS AMERICAN WAY PRODUCES BEST FIGHTERS

HONOLULU, T. H., Dec. 25 (AP).—The fiery test of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7 has convinced a naval officer that the nonchalant courage and determined initiative of the American sailor makes him more than a match for the enemy.

"After observing the calm, almost nonchalant courage and the determined initiative tempered with common sense that American enlisted men showed during the recent attack, there is no doubt in my mind of our superiority or that our system of training is correct," said this officer, a lieutenant commander whose minelayer shot down a Japanese dive bomber.

The attackers on Dec. 7 carried propaganda leaflets urging Japanese to "listen to the voice of doom—open your eyes, blind fools," the navy disclosed.

Along with this warning in Japanese was, in English, "You damned, go to the devil."

MOTHER OF 2 SLAIN BY HER EX-LOVER AS SHE DECORATES TREE

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 25 [Special].—Joseph Salpatrick, 31 year old paper mill worker, was in jail here tonight after confessing to Sheriff Charles W. Struble the slaying of Mrs. Mildred Whipple, 29, mother of two children, shortly after midnight this morning.

Mrs. Whipple, who has been estranged from her husband, Roy, for several years, was killed by two shotgun blasts fired thru a window in the home of her sister, Mrs. Marguerite Gaines, where she was trimming a Christmas tree.

Sheriff Struble said the victim and Salpatrick had lived together for several years but that Mrs. Whipple broke off the relationship a month ago and went to live with Mrs. Gaines.

"She had me down, but I didn't intend to kill her," the sheriff quoted Salpatrick. "I guess you don't know what it means to be in love."

Assistant Prosecutor Wallace Kemp is expected to place formal charges against Salpatrick tomorrow.

Cuba Seizes Spanish Ship Again as War Talk Flies

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 25 (AP).—The Spanish cargo ship Rita Garcia, released yesterday from navy department custody, was seized again today coincident with European speculation that Spain soon might be drawn into the war on the side of the axis. The ship first was boarded by sailors seeking illicit cargo. They found none. Now the government charges it with carrying an excessive load.

LONDON'S LUXURY NIGHT SPOTS HIT NEW GAYETY PEAK

Britain Is at War, but You Would Never Guess It.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Christmas night, which is the night reserved by the Britshers for their real celebration, lacked very little of the gayety which characterized the peacetime festivities in the exclusive and fashionable west end hotels, restaurants, and cabarets. While the pleasures of Christmas were restricted among most people by the hardships of the war, the high class establishments did a record business.

Nowhere was there a single seat available. The maitre d'hotel in one of the most popular restaurant-cabarets said that so great was the demand for accommodations that, since six weeks ago, all the tables had been reserved from Christmas eve until Sunday night—both for luncheon and for dinner.

Like Peace Time.

"You wouldn't think there was a war on," he added. "It is like peace time."

More than 200 urgent telephone appeals for accommodations were received by this establishment alone, it was said.

A west end luxury hotel yielding to requests of "special customers" squeezed them int the lobby. In emergency dining rooms tables were placed side by side.

The most noticeable feature in two of London's most famous hotels were the many exquisitely dressed women, wearing dazzling jewels and expensive furs, accompanied by uniformed escorts.

The Hotel Ritz offered a menu consisting of oysters, smoked salmon, consomme, turkey, celery, potato salad, plum pudding, mince pie, ice cream, biscuits, and coffee. Champagne, which was the choice drink, was priced at $8 and $10 a bottle.

Dance Halls Thronged.

The more modest catering places also buzzed with merrymakers, a large proportion of whom were men of the fighting forces and uniformed girls. The dance halls, too, were heavily patronized, the more popular ones being forced to refuse admission to large numbers of persons as the enthusiasm reached its peak.

There were the customary Christmas carols, confetti throwing, and gun popping, interspersed with the popping of innumerable bottles of champagne.

The streets were almost free of vehicles, the public bus service having stopped at 4 p. m., and only a few taxis were visible. Brilliant moonlight relieved the blackout.

FINDS BABY SMOTHERED.

When Mrs. Delphine Sarnowski, 24 years old, arose yesterday morning she found her son, Robert, 6 weeks old, smothered in his crib in their home at 8455 Escanaba avenue. The father, Edward, 27, is a steel mill employé. They have another son, Edward Jr., 2 years old.

The Lake Is "Warm"

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Beatrice Vesely with a fan she brought along for the 13th annual Christmas swim of the Polar Bears' club, held off the Edgewater Beach hotel in Lake Michigan.

Light rain and cloudy skies will continue today in Chicago, Forecaster A. J. Knarr predicted last night. Little change in temperature is expected, with the thermometer rising to about 40 degrees.

Advisory storm warnings for Lake Michigan were issued, the report predicting winds of 35 to 50 miles an hour with intermittent freezing rain or snow. Knarr said this forecast applied only to the open lake.

While the weather bureau termed yesterday's weather of the "egg nog" variety, two women and three men, members of the Polar Bear club, decided it was too warm to sit around a fireplace. So they went swimming.

The club meets each Sunday and holiday during the winter, usually on a cake of ice. Yesteerday's small turnout was blamed on the unusually warm weather. With the temperature touching 38, it was one of the warmest Christmas days since the club was organized 13 years ago.

DRIVE RENEWED IN CONGRESS FOR ANTI-STRIKE LAW

Members Object to Labor, Industry Agreement.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25 (AP).—A renewed move for legislation to prevent wartime strikes gathered strength today as some members of congress expressed dissatisfaction with the agreement reached between representatives of labor and industry earlier in the week.

Sen. J. H. Ball.

Sen. Joseph H. Ball [R., Minn.], a member of the education and labor committee which has been studying anti-strike legislation, told reporters he would demand senate action on his bill setting up machinery for mediation of disputes.

Sen. Tom Connally [D., Tex.] already has served notice he would seek to bring up his measure permitting the government to take over struck plants and to freeze working conditions in those plants.

Sees Accord as Failure.

Ball said he failed to see how the labor-industry accord had settled the troublesome closed shop question, which he regarded as most important of all.

Representatives of the workers and management agreed Tuesday to ban all strikes and lockouts for the war's duration and to arbitrate their disputes by peaceful means. The agreement called for the creation of a war labor board, but the conferees were unable to work out a mutually acceptable formula.

Several legislators said it was not clear to them whether individual disputes of this nature would be reviewed by the projected war labor board or whether separate machinery would have to be set up.

Calls Labor Committee.

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas [D., Utah] has told members that he would call the labor committee together after the Christmas holidays to review the decision of the labor-industry conference and to decide what action should be taken.

While Thomas said he planned to resist senate action on the drastic Smith bill previously passed by the house, other members said there probably would be strong demands in the senate for action on some type of anti-strike measure. The Smith measure, among other things, provides for a cooling off period before strikes could be called in defense industries.

BLANCHE BATES, ACTRESS, WIFE OF GEO. CREEL, DIES

Starred in 'Girl of the Golden West.'

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 25 [Special].—Blanche Bates Creel, 69 years old, who starred in 1905 in New York in "The Girl of the Golden West," died today. She was the wife of George Creel, director of propaganda in the first World war.

Miss Bates made her first professional appearance as Mrs. Hilary in "The Senator" at Stockwell's theater here in 1894. It was a year later that she appeared in the old Columbia theater in "Sweet Lavender" and, later, as Nora, in "The Doll's House." Later, she appeared as Milady with James O'Neill in "The Three Guardsmen." She also appeared in "Nobody's Widow," "Madame Butterfly," and a number of other plays.

Marries Creel in 1912.

In 1912, after her marriage to Creel, then an editorial writer for the Rocky Mountain News and a reform candidate for police commissioner of Denver, Colo., Miss Bates ended her contract with David Belasco.

In 1915, Miss Bates, married three years, gave birth to a son, named George Bates Creel. She is survived by her husband, a son, Bates, and a daughter, Mrs. Leslie Lubliner.

The movies saved the theater during the depression, Miss Bates often asserted. She had never been in the films.

"When the theater was going thru a lack of confidence, of money, and in audiences in the last few years, the movie people suddenly realized that what they needed in talking pictures was actors, and they gave jobs to actors," she said in 1934.

Theater Needed Audiences.

"Now, in turn, the theater realizes that what it needs is audiences, so it is reemploying the actors who bring in the audiences that have been going to the movies and conscientiously staying away from the theater."

Miss Bates believed they stayed away because they were "tired of the dregs that theatrical producers believed the public wanted."

Miss Bates believed then the public would rather go once to the theater than three times to the movies, and demanded that producers give them "clean, imaginative, and beautiful plays."

UNLICENSED PAIR RUN CLASSES IN 'HEALTH' STUDIO

Reporter Takes Treatment to Drive Out 'Poison.'

This is another article in a series by Tribune reporters who have visited quack doctors and submitted to their "treatments." The state department of registration and education has obtained 11 warrants charging violation of medical laws. The series will be continued in an early issue.

BY BARBARA ADAMS.

Having appointed themselves assistants to Mother Nature, Doc J. A. L. Attenhauser and his buxom blonde wife, Frances, not only do all they can to help her along—for a fee—but they also teach others to do so—for a fee.

They teach, altho they have no license to practice what they preach—or teach. They are the owners of the Kelvyn Park Health studio, 4752 Fullerton avenue, and on Dec. 11 both were arrested in a drive on quacks by the state department of registration and education, ordered by Frank G. Thompson, the director. The Attenhausers were two of 11 seized by the police on warrants issued by Judge Albert E. Isley in the County court.

I visited the Kelvyn Park Health studio several days before the Attenhausers were taken to the County jail.

Sign Advertises Classes.

On a bookcase in the reception room was a small sign, "J. A. L. Attenhauser, D. N., Nature's Assistant." I had seen in the window as I entered another sign saying that "classes are being organized in massage and physio-therapy. There were two men in the room in white uniforms and a woman in a nurse's uniform and cap.

I asked to see "the doctor" and a heavy-set man about 40 arose and said, "Speaking."

"Mrs. Attenhauser will take care of you," said "Dr." Attenhauser.

"O!" I said. "I thought YOU were 'Nature's Assistant,' and smiled at him. He grinned.

"I can take care of you; I can treat you," said Mrs. Attenhauser. She led me into an anteroom and indicated I was to remove my clothes. "What's the matter?" she inquired.

Finds Blood Pressure Low.

"I've been jumpy—don't sleep well at night," I said. She told me to lie on the table and covered me with a bedsheet. Then she proceeded to take my blood pressure, which she told me was low. She pressed the lower part of my hand, between the thumb and first finger.

"Does that hurt?" she asked.

Then she applied the same kneading pressure to a spot on my right foot and I yelled, "Ouch!" anticipating her question.

"You see?" she said. "That shows that the glands are not operating properly. They don't throw off poisons as they should. When it hurts there as I press hard, that proves it."

Mrs. Attenhauser is husky and has strong, heavy arms. She began to put great pressure with her hands on various parts of my abdomen. It really hurt and I groaned.

"Gee, that hurts!" I cried. I thought she might let up. Instead, she put more pressure on the same spot and I did yell.

"Ouch!" "O, ouch!"

"Gall bladder!" grunted Mrs. Attenhauser. "It's the gall bladder and the liver. They're way off!"

But Don't Worry.

"Goodness gracious!" I said, thinking of the going over the doctors at Passavant Memorial hospital had given me for three days to determine whether anything was wrong with me. They had pronounced me in perfect condition. "Good gracious!" I repeated.

"Yes, that's the poison in the gall bladder that hurts," said Mrs. Attenhauser. "But, don't worry, I can fix it. I'll drain it. We'll get rid of the poison!"

And she went on pushing and manipulating my stomach and abdomen for another 15 minutes, her work punctuated by regular groans from me.

Finally she let up and said, "Now that's done and all the poison is drained out. Now you'll feel much better. There's nothing like a liver and gall bladder treatment like that to drain the gall bladder and get rid of the poison."

I turned and her next move was to crack my backbone. Up and down my spine she moved, cracking and cracking.

"Now for the neck!" said Mrs. Attenhauser, and to my dismay she took a strong hold on my neck with one hand and the top of my head with the other.

Cracking the Bones.

Then, suddenly, she gave a jerk and it really wasn't quite so bad as I'd expected. She let me rest for a moment, then jerked it again. Each time there was that crack in the bones of the neck which sounds like a pistol shot inside the head.

"Now that's all of that for today," she said, laying me back and letting me rest. She placed a hot pad at my back.

She went into another treatment room. I coud hear voices there. I lay for a time and when the heater got hot I pulled the string and shut it off. Soon Mrs. Attenhauser came back. She said she had been busy in the other room because they were forming a class in massage and physiotherapy in there.

"They get the rubbing and the heat treatment stuff," she explained, "but they don't get this heavy stuff I gave you for the liver and gall bladder. That's too heavy for this class; they don't get it."

Mrs. Attenhauser charged me $2.50. She gave me a card she called a "treatment card" and told me if I wanted to take advantage of it, I could pay $22 for 10 treatments, thus saving $3. The card, she added, was good thruout the year from date.

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY FREIDA ZYLSTRA.

THE QUESTION.

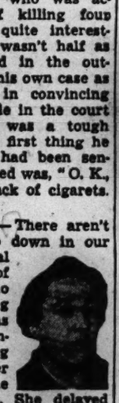
In all your experience as a deputy sheriff which would you say was the most interesting case you've attended?

WHERE ASKED.

Criminal Court building, 2600 South California avenue.

THE ANSWERS.

J. J. Lelivelt—I found the trial of the young murderer who was accused of killing four persons quite interesting. He wasn't half as interested in the outcome of his own case as he was in convincing the people in the court that he was a tough guy. The first thing he said to me after he had been sentenced to be electrocuted was, "O. K., chief—I owe you a pack of cigarets. I lost our bet."



Annette Whitehead—There aren't many women who go down in our records as habitual criminals, so the case of the young woman who was accused of stealing too many fur coats was unusual. She added interest by challenging the bailiffs to take her out on the stand as she was—completely nude. She delayed her own case for only a few days.

Mary Meyers Muscato—For the last seven days of her trial, a middle aged woman who was accused of shoplifting went on a hunger strike. She was sentenced to 1 to 10 years and when she left she said she's going to starve herself to death before she would serve her term. As yet she hasn't changed her mind.

William F. Feeney—We had an exciting climax to an interesting case. A young man was being tried for murder and while he was off the stand he was isolated in what we call the "bull pen." His mother came to visit him and brought him a gun. He shot his way out of there and got as far as the second floor. He killed a guard there but was caught before he got any farther.

Charles Kordcki—I think it was the case of the two well-to-do young women who murdered a Chinese laundry man supposedly for the money he had stowed away. They put his body in a trunk and dropped it on the street on the west side. Their motive seemed so flimsy and their crime was so crude that it was hard to believe that two intelligent women like they would do it.

Patrick Keenan—The longest case in the history of Illinois is the one I think most interesting. The jury was locked up four months and two days. It was in a conspiracy trial where 10 or 12 of the finest lawyers and four assistant state's attorneys were on the case. There were many unions and companies involved and many investigations made. After all that the verdict was "not guilty."

Mary Lewandowski—I've witnessed very many interesting cases, but the most interesting, from a very morbid standpoint, was a young attractive common law wife and mother of an adorable 3 year old daughter. She was guilty of abandoning her new born baby in a garbage can. The surprising development of the trial was that she was found guilty of having done it twice before. She was sentenced to 12 years in the House of Correction.

TEACHER, FREED OF DRINK CHARGE, TAKES OWN LIFE

Board Had Accused Her of Serving Pupils.

New York, Dec. 25 [Special].—A Christmas morning suicide in a Lower Manhattan apartment ended the story of Isabelle Hallin, taffy haired former English and dramatic high school teacher who was fired by a small town New England school board four years ago on charges of cocktail drinking and cigaret smoking.

Isabelle Hallin.

At 3 a. m. today Miss Hallin was found dead from gas in her ninth floor one room apartment in East 12th street. Two jets of a kitchen range were turned on full. She was 32 years old.

There was no note, but in the woman's purse was a letter which caused police to communicate with a Boston newspaper. It was then learned that the suicide victim was the teacher around whom a furor raged in Saugus, Mass., in the summer of 1937.

Father Aids Identification.

Further identification was provided by her father, C. Fred Hallin of Saugus, a retired electrical dealer.

"Why do you think she did it?" he was asked.

"I know why. It's that old trouble she had here with the school board. She never got over it. She became such a figure in our small town that she was forced to leave home. I'm sorry, but I just can't talk about it any more."

Miss Hallin, then 28, was discharged by the Saugus school board on charges that she had served cocktails to the cast of a school play while they were rehearsing "The Bishop Misbehaves." Several members of the board followed this up by declaring that Miss Hallin wore clothes that were much too tight and flimsy for a school teacher—and that she also had been seen smoking cigarets.

Miss Hallin appealed the ouster, declaring she had never served cocktails to students—and, furthermore, that she had never drunk any herself. She filed a $10,000 slander suit against Mrs. Minnie B. McDuffee, minister's wife and Women's Christian Temperance Union worker who had been chief among her traducers.

Exonerated by Jury.

The jury found for Miss Hallin but awarded her only $1 damages. Later Miss Hallin gave up the battle for reinstatement, announcing she was glad to be "rid of all the old fogeys."

She told all her friends she had been approached by a Hollywood talent scout and was about to take a screen test for Twentieth Century-Fox. Her name also was linked romantically with Earl Lawrence, handsome radio baritone. But the screen test failed despite her undisputed claims to beauty and Lawrence apparently vanished out of her life.

She obtained a part, for a time, with a Boston radio program, "The Marriage Clinic." Then she drifted to New York. She had been employed here by an importing company.

ROLE OF DOCTOR IN TIME OF WAR TO BE OUTLINED

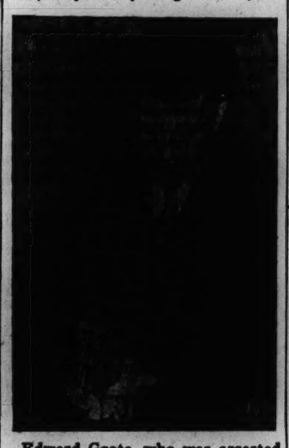
The rôle of the physician in the war will be outlined tomorrow night by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Herman Bundesen, president of the board of health, at the International house on the University of Chicago campus.

The talks will be sponsored by the Association of Medical Students and the Intern Council of America as part of their joint three day convention which begins tomorrow. The address of Dr. Fishbein will be broadcast over a radio network.

Delegates to the convention, all of them medical students or interns from all parts of the nation, will hold clinics at Billings hospital and will take part in panel discussions on civilian defense and medical war aid. On Sunday night they will attend a dance for British, Chinese, and Russian war relief.

A Burglar Undone

(Story in adjoining column.)



Edward Grote, who was arrested early yesterday as the burglar who was outwrestled by a young woman who weighs 50 pounds less than he.

Mrs. Katherine Rafter identifying Grote as the man she surprised in her home and further surprised by outgaming him in a wrestling match.

Kelly Field Cadet Dies in Night Plane Crash

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 25 (AP).—A Kelly field cadet, David B. Anderson Jr., Spartanburg, S. C., crashed to death last night six miles west of Floresville when his plane plunged into an open field.

'KEEP HER AWAY!' PLEADS VICTIM OF WOMAN BATTLER

Burglar Admits Mother Is Too Much for Him.

Altho he outweighs her by 50 pounds, Edward Grote does not want to wrestle with Mrs. Katherine Rafter.

"Keep her away from me!" he said in the Fillmore street police station yesterday. "Keep her away! I want no part of her—she's too tough!"

Grote was arrested at 5 a. m. when he arrived at his home at 3459 Diversey avenue. Police waiting there for him seized him still minus the overcoat and hat he had lost Wednesday in his first encounter with Mrs. Rafter, who is 20 years old and weighs 115 pounds.

The Decision Was Technical.

The young woman leaped upon the husky Grote when she surprised him in her home at 10 South St. Louis avenue upon returning from a shopping tour with her infant son, Patrick. They wrestled thru the home and out the kitchen door into the back yard before he wriggled out of coat and hat and escaped.

"Yes! You're the man!" said Mrs. Rafter as she confronted him in the police station. "What were you doing in my flat,"

"O, O, nothing!" mumbled Grote, shying away.

"You were the man!" the young woman repeated. "You had my $16, didn't you?" And the burglar replied: "Yes, I'm the man—I had it."

Traced by Cleaning Marks.

Detectives John Coughlin and Walter Kelly, with the help of a cleaners' mark in both hat and coat, traced Grote to his home and set police there to wait for him.

"But the police had things wrong when they thought I fought him for the purse containing $16," Mrs. Rafter said. "It wasn't that at all. When I walked into the flat and found this strange man there, I just saw red. I said to myself, 'Suppose I'd left the baby here while I went to the store—and this man broke in!' It just made me wild."

INDIANA HUNTER KILLED.

English, Ind., Dec. 25 [Special].—Kermit Smitson, 32, was killed today by a charge from a shotgun discharged as he climbed a fence. Smitson was a teacher of crossroad schools near his farm home. He is survived by his wife, Lucille.

DEFENSE WORKER HELD IN ROBBERY; FORMER CONVICT

Nabbed in Holdup by Store Customer.

Sixteen years served as a convict in two state prisons did not keep Sam Baron, alias Nathan Berman, out of two jobs in defense plants in the Chicago area, it was revealed last night.

Early Sunday morning, Baron, who is 34 years old, entered a radio store at 203 North Cicero avenue and held up the clerk, Louis Lee and a customer, Robert Storm, 309 North Lorel avenue. Storm noticed the bandit had no gun, and after the man had taken $20 from the cash register and started away, Storm brought him down with a flying tackle at the door.

Police Learn His Record.

Storm and Lee took the $20 and put it back in the register, then called police, who took Baron to the Austin station. Baron's record was received last night.

On Feb. 14, 1925 Baron was sentenced to Pontiac for 23 years for rape. Three robbery charges were then stricken off. He served nearly ten years in Pontiac. He was paroled Jan. 5, 1935.

Released in September.

In June of 1935 he went to Joliet on a plea of guilty to larceny, reduced from robbery. He served six years and was released last September.

He went to work in September at the Wilmington ordnance plant as a pipe coverer, where he stayed until a week ago. Then he went to work at the Buick airplane engine factory at North avenue and La Grange road in a similar job.

Policemen Edward Tighe, John Daly and Bernard Devine, who arrested Baron, said he had stubs of pay checks in his possession to show he had worked in both defense plants.

QUIZ ACCUSED NEGRO RAPIST ON OTHER CRIMES

A negro held on charges of raping and robbing a young woman was being questioned yesterday by Woodlawn police as a suspect in other crimes.

William Jones, 24, of 6729 Evans avenue, was arrested earlier in the day when he returned to the woman's car which he had abandoned at 85th street and Calumet avenue. The attack, according to the victim, occurred at 84th street and Vernon avenue where he had forced her to drive the car.

In Jones' pocket, police found $75 and a watch taken from the woman. Police said she identified him and he admitted the attack.

—Stephen Decatur.

SCATTERED WEAPONS.

Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg, who was formerly commanding officer at Hickam field in Hawaii, has been placed under arrest because of a speech he made a few days ago at Columbus, O. He said, among other things, that the destruction at Pearl Harbor was attributable to the policy of sending American airplanes all over the world instead of keeping them where they were needed for our own defense.

Col. Muhlenberg has lately been serving as air officer of the 5th corps area and at the time the speech was made was on leave, pending his retirement from the army. It is not our purpose here to comment on the propriety of his arrest but rather to call attention to the charge he made. If what he said is true, and it seems reasonable to assume that he knew what he was talking about, a new line of inquiry has been opened to the commission investigating the circumstances of the Dec. 7 attack.

We know already that the army and navy were surprised by the Japanese and we have Secretary Knox's word for it that except for the surprise the damage would not have been serious. We have Secretary Hull's indignant denial of the report that the state department had requested the navy to suspend its Hawaiian patrols pending the outcome of the negotiations with the Japanese. Mr. Hull's vehemence is understandable. He had entered upon negotiations which he knew might lead to war and it may safely be assumed that before doing so he had assurances from the navy department that the fleet was ready for eventualities. This expectation was not realized. The navy was caught with its planes and anchors down. Mr. Hull is properly anxious to avoid any share in the disgrace.

The remarks of Col. Muhlenberg carry the argument a step farther. If it is true, as he says, that our air defenses at Hawaii had been weakened by the export of aircraft to foreign armies, the question arises whether even if our men had been on the alert they could have succeeded with the equipment at their disposal in defending the bases.

The further question arises whether our forces in the Philippines have been adequately provided with modern weapons of war. There is little information available on this point, but we do know, from a dispatch sent by Mr. Clark Lee of the Associated Press, that a Filipino squadron is flying outmoded planes which are no match for the Japanese aircraft. The squadron, which Mr. Lee visited, was obliged to remain on the ground while Japanese bombers flew overhead.

Before the war started it would have been easy to supply our forces in the Philippines with the best and latest products of our arsenals and factories. Now the problem of sending supplies to the islands has become a good deal more difficult. It is infuriating to think that our forces at that far outpost may be at a needless disadvantage because of a shortsighted strategy which provided arms for other nations before assuring the safety of our own forces in our island possessions.

WE NEED NO LITTLE HITLERS.

Gov. Culbert L. Olson of California has proclaimed a "state of emergency" in that state. Earl Warren, attorney general of the state, finds an alarming similarity between the governor's proclamation and a statute passed in 1929 and designed, says Mr. Warren, for application only to limited areas that have suffered natural disasters. Under the 1929 act, and therefore presumably under Gov. Olson's proclamation, the governor could rule by decree, Hitler fashion.

While allowance must be made for the fact that Olson has a long established reputation as blowhard and showoff, and likewise for the fact that Warren is his political enemy, the picture is not enticing. We take some comfort in the fact that California is 2,000 miles away.

The federal government runs our wars. Americans face a problem of terrible import in delegating to the federal government the peremptory powers necessary to prosecute the war without having those powers used to destroy our own freedom. We cannot tolerate 48 little Hitlers throwing their weight about in the state capitals. There is no disposition to such conduct at Springfield and the people and courts of California will no doubt find methods of squelching it at Sacramento if Gov. Olson starts issuing decrees.

PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOLISH.

Despite the obligation of all local governments to cut their expenditures to fit the pocketbook of the wartime taxpayer, the proposal to cut some 80 visiting nurses off the staff of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium smacks of false economy. If the reduction in staff goes thru the health of the community will suffer, not only immediately, but for years to come.

Chicago is none too well provided with public facilities for the detection and cure of tuberculosis. Because of the inadequate number of free beds, too many of the patients are past hope of recovery by the time they can be admitted to the municipal sanitarium or the County hospital.

Early diagnosis is the secret of successful treatment of this disease. The nurses are not diagnosticians, but they are the shepherds who bring the patients to the clinics for diagnosis, visit and advise families of patients to discover infection in other members of the family, and perform the other field duties essential to eradication of the disease in the community. Loss of their services will be a serious blow to public health.

The Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium must economize to fit its budget into lowered tax revenue. It has its own tax levy, but actually is only a branch of the city government. There is no reason that we know why the city cannot appropriate funds to the sanitarium outside the special tax levy. Since economy is necessary, the necessity can be served by weeding another 80 employés out of the city hall and appropriating the money thus saved for the MTS. It would be a simple task to find 80 city hall pay rollers less useful to the public than are the nurses.

THE COLLEGES FACE WAR.

On more than a hundred college campuses the students gathered in special convocations before they came home for their present vacations. At those meetings their teachers, deans, and presidents sought to help them answer the question that has been foremost in the mind of every man among them since Dec. 7.

The advice given varied. At the University of Illinois Dean Harno, a thoughtful man, could only say that it was for each student to make his own self-appraisal and on the basis of that decide where he can best serve his country. At the University of Chicago President Hutchins urged that volunteering for the armed forces be stopped, because operation of the selective service act can do a better job of placing every American where he can serve best. It now seems probable that the program urged by Dr. Hutchins will be adopted at Washington.

This is to be a long war, and immediate and future needs must be weighed together. The student may be sorely needed within the next 12 months behind a gun in Alaska, Hawaii, or on the Pacific, but the longer need may demand that he finish the technical training that will make him even more useful, two or three years from now, in service or in the factories.

One thing is certain. Leaving entirely aside the needs of industry, the colleges and universities can do an immensely useful job for the nation in the technical training of officers for all branches of the services. Never has a war made greater demands for technical skill. The service academies and schools are limited in capacity, and on many subjects their faculties are inferior to those in the colleges.

In September, 1918, the colleges embarked on an officer training program, the Student Army Training corps. There was little or no selection of candidates. Nearly any high school graduate who thought it would be nice to have the government pay his tuition at college could enroll. The armistice came two months later, and so far as the SATC was concerned it was a good thing that it did.

President Hutchins appraised the SATC properly when he commented that it did not give enough military training to make good soldiers, but just enough to keep its members from getting an education.

This time, beyond doubt, more consideration is going to be given to the training of officers and specialists. Since we are a democracy, fighting for democratic principles, we should have a democratic army. No measure would do more to assure us such an army than an ironclad rule that from this day forth all commissions and all appointments to the service academies shall be made from the ranks of the services. Service in the ranks will make better officer material. It is the closest approximation we can get, in the necessary haste of wartime, to the discipline that is inculcated at West Point and Annapolis.

In this training job, as we have said, the colleges can perform a most useful part. We will probably need a score of military and naval academies. The buildings, equipment, and nonmilitary faculties for them are waiting on a hundred campuses.

THEIR DUTCH IS UP.

The United States and Great Britain were supposed to do the heavy work against the Japanese. It is, therefore, a real surprise to find that so far the most effective blows in the Asiatic war theater have been struck by the Dutch, who originally were regarded as stepcousins in the joint war effort. A recent report from the Netherlands Indies said that a Dutch submarine had sunk three big Japanese transports and a tanker. In 19 days of the war the Dutch navy and air force were credited with sinking 14 Japanese ships and seriously damaging at least 4 others—more enemy vessels than did the navies of the great powers.

The Dutch have a small but serviceable fleet in the East Indies, and an air force that already has proved its value by helping out the hard pressed RAF in Malaya. The Dutch, of course, are fighting for their richest possessions when they defend the Indies. Because their homeland is under the Nazi heel, they have an additional incentive. The Indies are the last free Dutch soil anywhere in the world, except Surinam in South America. There is a natural disposition to keep the flag of freedom flying.

William the Silent said, "It is not necessary to hope in order to undertake, nor to succeed in order to persevere." He liberated his country, and those who have inherited his spirit may hope that their efforts will succeed in their time.

CHICAGO'S WAR EFFORT.

Mayor Kelly's statement that we have defeated hysteria, which could be our worst enemy in girding for a real war effort, will tend to increase confidence in the mayor's conception of his duties as civilian defense coördinator. The mayor says there is no sense in getting worked up over possible blackouts and other devices to whip up a frenzy. There was plenty of that in other cities before we ever got into the war. What we should do, he says, is to go calmly about our jobs.

The principal job we all have now is to turn out the tools of war so that the services will have everything they need to put up an effective fight. Almost equally important is the job of financing the war effort.

Before the war began there was a good deal of hysterical running in circles. Since the war began there is still a tendency in some quarters to continue activities that only distract energy from useful pursuits. Women who want to get measured for a uniform right away might do better if they trained to work a split shift in an armament plant. They would not get their pictures in the paper, but they would help turn out the wherewithal to bomb a few Japs. That is the main thing on the agenda at present.

THE MEDICINE CABINET'S FULL.
[Tulsa Tribune.]

Some time ago the government's tremendous stocks of raw opium, stored away in treasury vaults, was revealed. With quinine, this is regarded as an indispensable drug.

Now it is known that 10 million ounces of pure quinine have been also stocked in similar vaults, enough for a four or five year supply in an emergency.

In many respects our national foresight has not been of the best. We have, in scriptural language, left undone the things which we ought to have done. Here, however, is a case, in the stocking of the national medicine chest, where foresight seems to have paid out in a big way.

HOLIDAY AFTERMATH.

Shandy Gaff's Christmas card wins first prize in the Linemaster's collection—his fourth successive championship. It's a water-colored drawing of holiday activity in a seaside town of colonial New England, and contains dozens of quaint figures. Some time we're going to hold an exhibition of the Shandy Gaff series, and the Art institute would be the right place for it.

Alfred MacArthur's card is a close second. It is a color etching by a young Mexican artist, Leopoldo Macias Baez: a wayside scene in Mexico with a vista of Route 1942, which leads no man knows where. In the foreground is a "parada," or bus stop, whose signboard says that it is the Gran Pulqueria Mi Chica Maria, Don Alfredo MacArthur unico proprietario. An advertisment on an adobe wall announces the Great Cosmic Lottery [in Spanish], in which the chief prizes are health, happiness, and prosperity. . . . Worthy of a frame in any "rumpus room."

This column's contributors hit a new high in Christmas card originality, and are assured that their greetings are occupying a place of honor beside the Linemaster's ceremonial balsam. . . . And here's a card that answers a question the Linemaster has heard but not answered about 60 times in the last month: Where is Old Doc Hall? O. L. Hall, ex-drama critic and newspaper publisher of Chicago, leads the life of Riley this winter at 70 Park-avenue, New York.

The Tribune company's Christmas card was a pretty thing, too; it accompanied a generous annual bonus check.

WILD DUCK DINNER.

It's thought to be great sport, I hear,
To shoot wild ducks, and geese, and deer.
I guess I'm dumb, because to me
It seems more fun to let them be.
I love their colors, movements quick;
To see them dead makes me quite sick:
And as for eating game, the stuff
Unless well-hung, is pretty tough.
[Well-hung, you know, means—well, you know;
But epicures prefer it so.]
Besides, wild duck, add what you wish,
Herbs, spices, fruit—still tastes of fish.
They say it's safe to swallow shot,
But breaking teeth I'm sure is not.
Go on, you have a wild duck meal;

Feeling the Pinch of Total War.

I used to think broadcasting the weather was silly. The announcer would say, "It's raining" or "It's snowing." I would look out of our dinette windows, and sure enough it was raining or snowing. Sometimes the announcer would say, "It's hot" or "It's cold." I could feel that. It was all very obvious, and I wished they would stop.

Well, now that they have stopped the weather broadcasts, what happens?

I get up in the morning [isn't that odd!] and I look out of our dinette window; the sky is overcast and it looks like rain. It does rain in December, you know. So what do I do? When I leave for the office, I take my raincoat, umbrella, and rubbers. No sooner have I left the flat than the sun comes out, and there I am in my raincoat, and rubbers, with my umbrella over my head, waiting for the rain. It is a dismal sight, and I wonder how I would look if I added to my costume a pair of the Linemaster's famous rain pants.

Not broadcasting the weather has even a more devastating effect on Choppy, my snuggle pup. Now I don't know is it warm or is it cold. My sense of temperature is not what I thought it was, and it is warm in December, you know. So I do not know whether to put Choppy's little coatie upon him or not, and what happens? When I get outside I find the thermometer is ten below, and poor Choppy is freezing. So what do I do? I take off my red muffler and tie it criss-cross over his chest and put my red ear muffs on his ears. The color effect on a "white" doggie is electrifying.

A weather broadcast now and then is relished by both dog and man.

WOMAN'S WORK IS NEVER DONE.

Now there may be a time in the well-ordered home
When the radio's working all right,
And the motor car clicks like a fine metronome,
And the panes of the windows are bright;
And there's never a fam'ly dispute,
And the baby is really cute;
And even most bills may be paid now and then
(Which sounds a bit like simple bosh),
But there is no time in a domicile when
There are no dirty dishes to wash.

PLASTERS—USEFUL OLD TIME REMEDIES.

THERE was a time when every pain meant that a plaster must be slapped upon the aching region without delay. It was urged that the way to remove discomfort was to coax it out thru the skin. Even today we find leeches used to "draw off bad blood."

Every medical museum has a many bladed scarifying instrument. With this ancient device the epidermis was punctured, whereupon a suction cup would remove the fluid and relieve engorgement. Musty records describe holes made in the cuticle. The wounds naturally became infected and the discharging pus was thought to be "corruption" departing from the body. We know now that this was an added drain on the system.

A century ago a wholesale attack, in this manner, was made upon rheumatism. Irritating pastes were employed generously, as well as oils and other "burning" chemicals. Despite a good deal of suffering, some benefit seemed to follow. The explanation apparently lies in the fact that an enormous volume of blood is thrown into a given area, with engorgement of the underlying tissues and muscles.

This raises the question: How closely is the skin related to rheumatism? It is interesting to note that certain authorities believe that the disease is primarily in this structure because the circulation of most of these sufferers is sluggish. Not infrequently the cuticle will feel cold and flabby. In addition it will have lost most of its pinkish, ruddy shade. It would seem reasonable then to restore the blood flow—bringing the pores, sweat glands, etc., back to normal by supplying them with a huge quantity of nutriment.

We know that whenever this is accomplished perspiration is increased, elimination is improved, and the system is thus able to rid itself of a substantial amount of waste. Furthermore in the deeper parts more blood demands that the veins function efficiently in carrying away toxins. In consequence there is a corresponding decrease in the irritability of the nerve filaments.

Recently an ointment has been recommended for this purpose which will produce blisters. A British hospital, devoted largely to the treatment of rheumatism, has observed favorable results after the "raising" of a few puffy blebs. Reference is made particularly to the treatment of sciatica, wherein continuous flushing [blistering] apparently resulted in a corresponding rush of vital fluid to the vicinity of the nerve. Marked abatement of symptoms ensued.

Looking at the subject from a practical point of view in an effort to explain the good effects of the plan we may recall that a rather powerful drug [histamine] is liberated whenever the epidermis is injured. This substance has the ability to dilate the fine capillaries and thus aid healing because so much new, fresh blood is poured into the injured locality.

It has been suggested that this is exactly what happens when we use a liquid or ointment which brings the sense of smarting. We can understand then why our older authorities reported cures subsequent to the application of plasters. Perhaps grandmother's hot poultice was best, after all.

A METALLIC TASTE.

V. M. writes: What causes a coppery taste in the mouth?

REPLY.

A profusion of fillings or metal bridgework may be responsible. The digestive tract may need investigation as well as the condition of the blood and the kidneys.

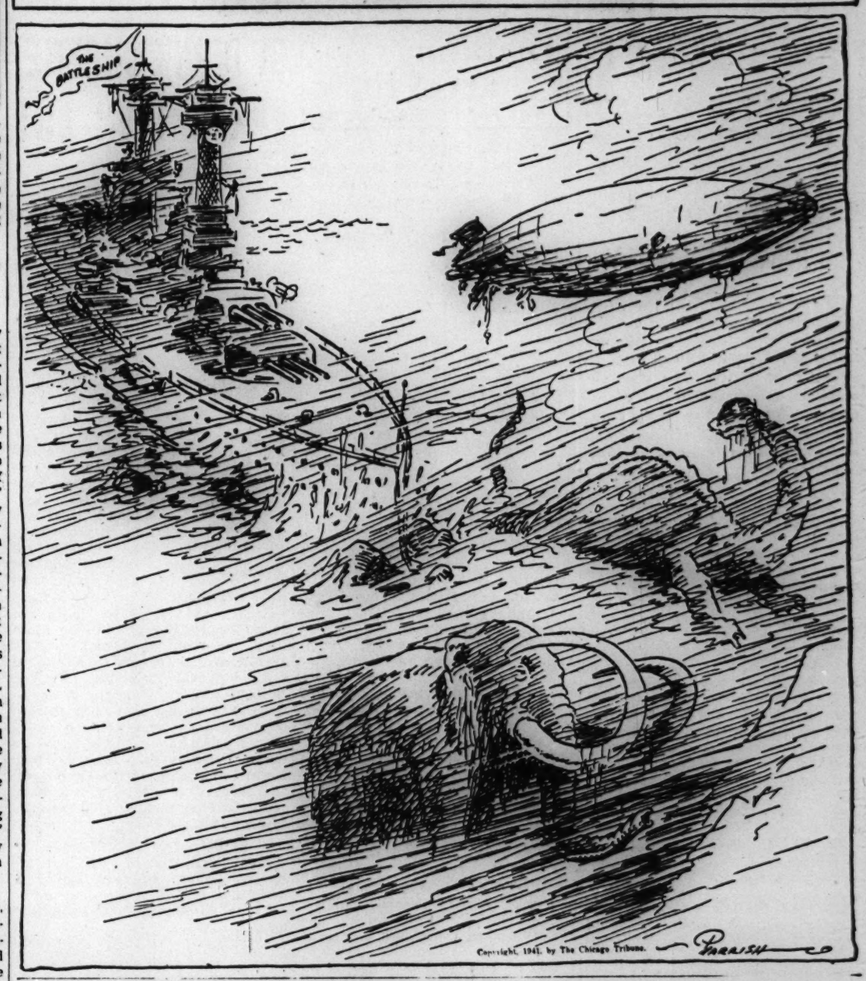
WRONG DOPE.

H. W. writes: I crave lettuce and my friends tell me it is because there is a drug in it. Are they right?

REPLY.

They are misinformed. There is an old but erroneous saying that lettuce contains opium.

MOORING AMONG THE MONSTERS



VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed, attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

POLITICAL CHRISTMAS GREETING.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—When I received my old age pension check this month I found enclosed in it a holly bordered greeting signed by Arthur C. Lueder, state auditor, in which he said in part:

"This is the end of my first year in office and I want you to know it has been a pleasure to serve you. I have made every effort to maintain our schedules so that you would receive your check on time every month. Thank you for your fine spirit of coöperation."

By what right does Mr. Lueder send his personal greetings to me at the expense of the state?

I resent his implication that I am indebted to him for the prompt mailing of checks. He is paid for that.

Maybe I am just an old grouch, but I would like to know what others think of it.

R. V. JOHNS.

SECRETARY KNOX'S QUALIFICATION.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Your excellent editorial, "Knox Must Go," has caused much favorable comment. I heard about it at the breakfast table, also on the train, and again at the Union League club. It had been cut out of THE TRIBUNE the librarian was reading, and also out of one of the papers I saw. "Who's Who" says Sec. Knox is 68. The army retires them at 64. I can't see anything in Knox's record that shows he is qualified for the job. In his untimely article in the American Magazine, he says, "RAF flyers do not know enough of the sea, of ships, and of naval tactics to operate efficiently." Well, what does this six month Rough Rider know about the same subject? It's certainly tough on the navy.

JOHN R. REILLY.

WEATHER CENSORSHIP LEAK.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—After our entry into the present conflict the Federal Communications commission restrained all broadcasting stations from divulging weather information. All Americans can appreciate governmental restrictions on any source of information which might prove beneficial to the enemy. However, any one having access to a short wave receiver [and our enemies possess some highly efficient radio equipment] can tune in the aircraft bands and gain a multitude of weather data: temperature, ceiling, visibility, wind velocity, barometric pressure, etc., every few minutes.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—If Churchill wants the best strategy for the protection of the Near East against Hitler, let him call Gandhi and other patriots of India to Washington at once, sign an agreement to give independence to India on the condition that India furnish the troops to defend the far east. India would respond immediately and would fight Hitler as the price of emancipation from the British empire.

ERNEST BRADSHAW.

A MOTHER'S SIDE OF IT.

Mundelein, Ill., Dec. 23.—Referring to your recent editorial, "The Other Side of 28," urging that young men of 18 and 19 be put in the army: You evidently do not have a son of 18, or you are one who is 29, and have had your education. Did you ever think of these young men that are 18, leaving their education? I think men who are educated make better soldiers. A boy of 18 is not fully grown and has not reached his physical peak.

I was so thankful that they are going to let my boy of 18 get some education, that I went right out and purchased a defense bond with my Christmas money. It would be a grand gesture if all mothers who have boys of 18 would purchase a bond right now.

MRS. M. WHAM.

NO WEST COAST PANIC.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—I read the article saying "people on the west coast are panic stricken." We just arrived from Seattle, Wash., and expect to return after spending the holidays with relatives, and attending to business. Any people leaving are those who have no responsibilities or property there. In the northwest all the precautions necessary in wartime have been taken, but there is no panic and people carry on the same as before.

Our salesmen and football players don't show any white feathers and the northwest won't either.

MR. AND MRS. E. C. HANSELPACKER.

ONCE WAS ENOUGH.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—Congratulations on your clear headed treatment of world events. Keep it up!

But—we have grave reason to watch at this time. Germany is obviously laying a smoke screen for some campaign. It is not like her to whine. "Russians won't give us time to eat or sleep." Are we to be caught patting ourselves on the back for our vicarious success in Russia, as we were caught bowing and scraping with Japan, while Germany plans and organizes her invasion of the western hemisphere? Let's have an end to spoofing ourselves. Our gullibility with Japan should have taught us a lesson.

COLLEGE TRAINED PILOTS.

Brookfield, Ill., Dec. 22.—A letter by "27 Year Old" appearing in the Voice of the People parallels my own thought. Why is it considered necessary to possess a college degree to be a fighter pilot? Does one acquire courage, daring, muscular coördination, and ability to obey orders by writing on test paper what they have committed to memory? Flash judgment also cannot be obtained in this manner.

I challenge any college graduate to learn flying more quickly than I, altho I am only a high school graduate. This experiment should be interesting and might even knock off a few brass hats.

SHARE IN ESTATE.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People].—My widowed mother died in Waukegan in 1914 leaving a cottage but no will. There are six children. One has managed the estate and one has since died.

1. Can this estate be probated now in order to settle same?

2. Two of the heirs were married, had children and died and their widows remarried. Who would be the direct heirs in a case like this?

O. H.

1. Yes, but in view of the time that has elapsed, it seems probable that you can get along without probate. We suggest that you talk this over with an attorney in a personal interview.

2. Their share in their deceased father's estate would be handled like any of their other assets.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—[Legal Friend of the People].—1. If A, who is receiving old age assistance pension from the government, has insurance policy on self, [2] without any beneficiary named, and gives same to B for money borrowed with a note stating amount to be spent on funeral upon death of A?

P. J.

1. You do not indicate whether he has concealed the insurance from the old age assistance officials so that fraud is involved.

2. Do you mean that there is a space for the naming of a beneficiary and nothing inserted therein? Or that the policy contains wording as to what is to be done with the money? In general, the effect of an insurance policy depends on its wording.

3. We are not in a position to give a negative answer without having your facts more adequately.

"Justice Deferred"

By William MacLeod Raine

(Copyright: 1941: By William MacLeod Raine)

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Waugh returns to Santa Rita, 20 years after he has seen his father ambushed and murdered, determined to bring the murderers to justice. He rescues Mary Lane from a holdup and possible kidnaping and finds she is the stepdaughter of Corbett Carey, friend of his father. With Corbett's son, Carl, Jack visits Jim Fallon, who was the first to arrive on the scene of the Waugh murder. Jim has been working at the Clinton ranch since the murder. Before Jack can question Jim, Tracy, foreman at the Clinton ranch, arrives, starts a fight, and is given a terrific beating by Jack. Jim, under Jack's protection, tells him he was sure old Ab Clinton instigated the murder as he saw Tracy and Ab's son, Brad, leave the scene of the murder just as he arrived. Old Ab still owns controling interest in the ranch, but Brad runs it, and is as unscrupulous as his father. But two of Ab's sons are well thought of and are prominent bankers, and Abner III., his grandson, is Mary Lane's suitor. Jack learns that old Ab robbed his father of his money bags after the murder and bought the Waugh ranch with the stolen money. When Jack meets Ike Parker and Clem Peake, two more of Clinton's hired men, he recognizes them as Mary's holdup men and notifies young Abner, who, investigating, finds it true. Abner talks to his grandfather, who assures him the men will be arrested, but instead old Ab offers Parker $500 to get rid of Jack. Parker, Peake, and Tracy lie in ambush for Jack, who has telephoned the sheriff to arrest the holdup men at the Clinton ranch. The men in ambush attack the wrong man and Jack arrives just in time to save the man's life and capture Parker, Peake, and Tracy. He takes them to the awaiting sheriff at the Clinton ranch, but the sheriff refuses to arrest Tracy as he claims he has no proof they attacked Jack. He does arrest Parker and Peake for Mary's holdup, but en route to town Brad and Tracy hold up the sheriff and allow the captives to escape to a hideout in the mountains. In the meantime, Paul Dillon, a small boy, is lost in the mountains and a posse, including Jack, sets out in search of the lost boy. Jack walks into a pocket and is captured by Parker and Peake, but before they kill him, young Abner, who has just found Paul, stumbles into the hideout and rescues Jack by promising not to notify the sheriff of the hideout until they have time to escape. In a drunken rampage, Tracy catches Jack at a disadvantage and Jack is forced to shoot him in self-defense. Jack, who is in love with Mary, realizes the killing has put a barrier between him and Mary. Corbett stands Jack's bail.

INSTALMENT XLI.

HIDE OUT.

Dixon grinned at Jack sheepishly. "You tell Corbett to come in if he has a mind to and a pore henpecked husband will bury the hatchet. Right now we don't want division in our camp when the A C outfit is on the peck again about you bumping off Tracy."

"What will the Clintons do about it?" Sally asked.

"I don't know, but even if I am tried I think any fair jury would acquit me." Waugh added, frowning a little in puzzled doubt: "We expected trouble with the district attorney about a bond, but he was as gentle as a lamb. I don't quite get that. Carey says the Clintons are strong politically. Why didn't they interfere to try to have me held in jail?"

"Begad, maybe they want you out, so they can pull off another killing like the one at the Longhorn Corral 20 years ago," Luke said grimly.

Jack was inclined to differ. "Not here in town, after there has been so much talk about the old feud. That would be too raw, since I am a stranger here and have no enemies except the Clintons."

One of the papers in its Sunday edition had carried a long story of the Sweetwater valley war for the range in early days, and in its account of the shooting of Tracy had pointed out that the trouble between the foreman and Waugh had arisen because of the Texan's suspicion of the other's complicity in his father's murder. In the second story no direct mention of the Clintons was made.

Jack was still more puzzled when he read a statement of old Abner Clinton in an afternoon paper to the effect that Tracy apparently had been drinking heavily prior to the trouble that resulted in his death and from the evidence of eyewitnesses seemed to have been the aggressor. This was so unlike what might have been expected from him that Jack guessed the influence of his grandson back of it.

Altho there were two reasons that kept Waugh from feeling very friendly to Abner Clinton III.—his family connections and the fact that he was probably going to marry the girl Jack loved—he admitted to himself that the youngster was a decent sort. He fought fairly, and he did not hit below the belt. Of course, he was not good enough for Mary, but after all he added up to quite a bit above the average of the genus homo.

Brad sat heavily in the saddle and looked down disgustedly at the tip-tilted terrain of hills and gulches below him.

"I wish this cussed scenery didn't all stand on its end," he grunted to himself. "No sense in those idiots camping so far up anyhow."

The sides of his mount were heaving under the strain of the hard climb with 250 pounds on its back. Sweat stained the shoulders and flanks of the animal.

Not far above them a saddle connecting two peaks dipped down in a curved ridge. A steep, rocky scarp led to it. Clinton put his horse at the last ascent. The bronco dug in for foothold and clambered up like a cat. It made the last 40 feet in a rush.

The ranchman raised his voice in a shout. In front of him lay a park that terminated in a rock barrier below which was a small boulder field. Out of this two men came cautiously. Neither of them answered the hail.

Clinton let his mount pick a way down the slope and across the valley. "Why didn't you answer?" he demanded querulously when he was close enough.

"Didn't know it was you, Brad," Parker replied. "We're particular about who our callers are these days."

The ranchman came down from the saddle as gracefully as a sack of oats. "I don't know what in Mexico you're doing here anyhow," he snarled peevishly. "This is no country for either of you. First thing you know the law will get you again. I can't keep on pulling you outa jams all the time."

"We'll be on our way tomorrow," Parker promised, soothingly. "All we been waiting for is to make sure the coast is clear." His gaze flickered toward Peake for a moment, in it a hint of warning. At any time Clem was likely to say the wrong thing unless prepared in advance.

"You could of got away any time in the last week," sneered Brad. "You're not so important that anybody is riding yore tail."

"Shorty thought maybe we had better go slow," Parker answered mildly.

"Shorty!" echoed Brad contemptuously. "What's Shorty but a lunkhead $30 a month hand?"

"Where is he, by the way? How come you to ride up instead of him?" Peake inquired slyly. He thought he knew the answer but wanted to be sure.

"Claims he's got a bellyache and took a week off to go see a doc in Santa Rita. Some faker told him once he was liable to get appendicitis if he didn't look out. Can you beat that?"

"That's right. A doc did tell Shorty that. It's the one thing in the world he is scared of."

"I can tell him one thing," Brad growled. "He'll be docked for every hour he is away." He found a shady spot, sat down, and fanned himself with his hat. "Another thing. You fellows aren't working for the A C any more. You ought to pay for this grub I have sent up here."

"You would take the pennies from a dead man's eyes, Brad," Parker told him contemptuously. "I never did see such a nickel pincher, unless it is your old man. Sure, we'll pay for the grub." He tossed a bill down in front of Clinton, just out of reach, and watched the hulking ranchman crawl forward on his hands and knees to get it.

"No use being mean, Ike," Brad said, puffing, after he had returned to the shelter of his boulder. "You threw that where I had to go get it, on purpose to annoy me. In these times a fellow has to watch corners or go to the poorhouse, except, of course, millionaires like you."

"Did Tracy send up some smoking for me?" Peake inquired.

"No. Warren has quit being interested in such things, altho I reckon he is doing some smoking at that." Brad tee-heed at his own witticism. He had delayed mentioning the death of the foreman until one of the others made a reference to him, in order to give more effect to the surprise.

"What do you mean?" Parker asked sharply.

"Why, didn't I tell you?" Brad responded cheerily. "Warren had a little bad luck yesterday. That fellow Waugh sent him to hell on a shutter."

The two outlaws stared at him. "Are you joshing?" Parker barked.

"I wouldn't josh about so serious a thing," Clinton assured him, enjoying the amazement of the other two. "The A C is out one foreman. Maybe one of you ambitious boys would like to apply for the job."

"How come?" Peake cut in. "Was Tracy killed in the open?"

Brad told them of Warren Tracy's death. They listened incredulously.

"You mean that Warren went into the store with a gun in his hand and covered this bird, then fooled around till he got killed himself?"

"That's right, Clem. Doesn't look reasonable, does it? But that is the way it was. Somehow you gentle home boys don't have any luck with Waugh."

"We would have had plenty of luck with him if it hadn't been for that dude nephew of yours," Parker boasted. "Even then I would of bumped him off if Ike hadn't said no."

"Yeah," Brad sneered. "If—if—if—"

"Since there is an open season on him why don't you take a whirl at him, Brad?" Parker mocked. "You ain't too fat to pull a trigger, are you?"

CHRISTMAS TRUE ANSWER TO LIFE, MINISTERS SAY

Congregations Largest in History of City.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Dr. D. S. Stark.

Chicago pastors, speaking before in the city's history, pointed yesterday to Christmas as the true answer to the question of the meaning of human life. Their Christmas sermons reiterated the theme of the timeless value of each person as demonstrated in the birth of a Savior who is both God and man.

of human nature," said the Rev. Dr. Iver M. Johnson, pastor of First Methodist church, Chicago temple. "Christmas says that human nature may become the vehicle of divine revelation. One never knows what human nature really is until one sees it in its finer expressions.

"Human nature is Benedict Arnold, but it also is George Washington. Human nature is Judas Iscariot, but it also is Jesus Christ. Despite cynicism and disillusionment, despite the sorry revelation of man at his wicked worst, Christmas comes with its good news about man."

Marks Birth of Son.

Dr. Dudley Scott Stark of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1424 North Dearborn parkway, stressed a similar theme.

"Christmas," he asserted, "marks the birth of the Son of God and also inaugurates the liberty of the children of God. National and political freedom stem from spiritual freedom. The religious roots of faith in God, immortality, human integrity, and dignity must be nourished for the defense of security and liberty."

Because Christmas gives meaning to human life, Dr. Clinton C. Cox told his Drexel Park Presbyterian congregation, it is therefore the cure for care and worry. He cited the words of the angel to the shepherds, frightened by the portents they had seen.

"'Fear not,' the angel said. That is very significant. Angels at Christ's birth said it and at Christ's resurrection, the angel speaking to the frightened woman again said, 'fear not.' Christ talked more against fear and worry than against any other human weakness. He had more reason for these to be in His life than any other one that ever lived, but He refused to worry.

Charity Toward Mankind.

"The year before us carries with it unusually tragic possibilities of fear. There are plenty of seemingly sensible reasons to make us afraid. We must now decide which shall rule and control our life—faith or fear."

The charity of God toward mankind in the nativity of Christ, was pointed out by the Rev. Adalbert R. Kretzmann, to his St. Luke's Lutheran congregation, Belmont and Greenview avenues, yesterday morning. He recalled that for the third time in the 58 years of the congregation's history, Christmas and war have met.

"The Lord has been so charitable toward us all in the nativity," Pastor Kretzmann declared, "that we all should certainly do all in our power, both nationally and personally, to hasten the day when terror and aggression, cynicism, oppression, race hatred, and class hatreds are broken down and done away. For this cause the heavens opened and the Savior came down to the lowliest of men."

CHICAGO SHARES CHRISTMAS WITH MEN IN UNIFORM

Homeless and Needy Also Get a Hand.

Warm hearts, tons of food and Chicago's traditional Christmas spirit yesterday shoved the grimness of war into the background for at least 24 hours—Christmas day.

As in the past there were few hungry persons in Chicagoland when the day drew to a close—dinners were given the homeless and unfortunates, thousands of baskets had been carried to the needy.

At Home Away from Home.

But soldiers, sailors and marines held in Chicago by shortened or canceled furloughs made Christmas, 1941, different from any since 1917. For them, as for all others, Chicago did its best to make the day a good one.

Nearly 500 soldiers from Fort Sheridan were guests of families who took the men into their homes and strove to liquidate that blank feeling which attacks a youth away from home at Christmas.

Typical of this hospitality was that provided by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Stransky in their home at 237 Walden drive, Glencoe. Eight soldiers joined them in their dinner and two turkeys totaling 40 pounds were served.

At Fort Sheridan, Navy Pier, Great Lakes Naval Training station, and the other training centers of the armed forces, Christmas dinner with all the trimmings was served. Entertainers from night clubs and cafés contributed their services.

More Christmas Spirit.

On the civilian front, the Christmas spirit gave out thousands of dinners on the near west side, in orphanages, missions and settlement houses.

Bernstein's restaurant, 676 West Madison street, held open house to more than 500 down-and-outers as they have every year since 1933.

At 1407 West Madison street, the Ideal Coffee shop opened its doors at 10 a. m. and gave full dinners to the first 500 persons who appeared.

Parties were held at St. Vincent's orphanage, the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, and the Juvenile home.

Prisoners Remembered.

Roast chicken was on the menu at the county jail and each of the 700 prisoners received fruit, cookies, candy, and tobacco.

At the Bridewell and the Chicago State hospital at Dunning, Christmas parties also were given.

The Municipal court and Capt. Thomas Duffy of the Central district did their part. Judge J. M. Braude, in Women's court, released eight women on their promises to appear in court today. Capt. Duffy freed 12 men held on disorderly conduct charges.

Fifty homeless boys who are students at the Glenwood Manual Training school were fed turkey dinners by school alumni at Younker's restaurant.

All we do to HALIBUT is BROIL it.....

..... that's all we do ..... just take those broad plump sea-fresh steaks and lay them on a smouldering hot fire ..... and keep a watch on them to take 'em off the minute they're exactly crisp and brown enough (but none of this is done until you order) ..... and seconds later ..... halibut is on your table ..... steaming broiling hot ..... with cooling cole slaw in another dish ..... for contrast.

That's all we do to halibut!

OPEN 26 HOMES TO 48 ORPHANS FOR CHRISTMAS

Forty-eight children from the Methodist Deaconess orphanage in Lake Bluff spent Christmas with families in Wilmette. They opened gift after gift around the Christmas tree. They ate turkey and the fixings until they nearly popped. There were 26 families to take them in when they got off the train.

All the children were tagged as a safety measure, but the older ones took care of the smaller—they ranged from 5 to 14 years—and the right children for the right families had all been arranged in advance.

In the evening the foster families took their guests back to the station, and all the assembly came to new life on the trains when each youngster eagerly showed his or her gifts to the others. "Be sure and ask for me," said one little girl as she took leave of her hostess. "I want to come back next year."

REVIVED BY RESCUE SQUAD.

Mrs. Marian Stoops, 54 years old, was revived by a fire department rescue squad yesterday after she suffered a heart attack in her home at 7719 Oglesby avenue.

JOE'S WIFE RECEIVES A GIFT—THANKS TO OLD DOBBIN'S SANTA

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 25 (AP).—Old Joe the Trashman's wife had a Christmas present today—thanks to the Emma Robinson horses' Christmas dinner fund.

It began to look like the missus was going giftless this year because Joe's half starved old nag would take the last thin dime for feed. But clattering down Fifth street yesterday, this sign caught old Joe's eye:

"Bring horses here for free Christmas dinner."

Joe's nag rubbed ribs with a lot of other hungry horses today and there was a bushel of delicious molasses-oats-corn-wheat mixture to take home after he'd had his fill.

Horses' Christmas dinners were inaugurated 34 years ago by the late Mrs. Emma Robinson, Olathe, Kas., philanthropist. When she died in 1932 her will provided that earnings from a $10,000 trust fund be used to perpetuate the dinners for old Dobbin.

NAME CHICAGO'S FIRST CHRISTMAS BABY ROSE CAROL

Chicago's first 1941 Christmas baby, a five and a half pound girl, arrived yesterday at 12:07 a. m. at the Wesley Memorial hospital. She came into the world lustily yowling what the nurses described as Christmas carols. For that reason her parents, Lieut. and Mrs. John Spears, 2612 Burling street, plan to name her Rose Carol. Lieut. Spears is an officer in the 132d infantry at Camp Forrest.

Another baby arrived shortly after midnight at the Franklin Boulevard hospital. It was a boy and was born to Mrs. Harold Pobuda, 1216 North Kedzie avenue.

The boy born to Mrs. Walter Mesick, 5650 West 64th place, Christmas morning was the 2,000th baby born in the Evangelical hospital, 54th and Morgan streets, this year.

CHRISTMAS TREE SETS FIRE.

Firemen of the 22d battalion worked half an hour last night putting out the flames caused when a short circuit set fire to Christmas tree in the home of John Fillit, 3441 North Ridgeway avenue.

WAR ENDS GIFTS OF AIRPLANES ON RADIO PROGRAM

Priorities Cut Off Supply of Weekly Prizes.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The war has overtaken the Wings of Destiny program, which is broadcast from Chicago NBC studios every Friday evening. The 63d and final airplane will be given away tonight. A Piper Cub plane has been awarded to listeners each week on the basis of letters written about aviation.

Priorities have cut off the supply of planes and no more will be available. The sponsor henceforth will devote five minutes of each half hour program, featuring plays about flying, to patriotic and defense purposes.

Two out of every three persons who received planes, learned to fly and obtained pilot's licenses, Mel Williamson, producer of the program, said yesterday. Many young aviation enthusiasts have sought advice about getting into military aviation thru the program, Williamson said. These were directed to local air corps procurement officers, he said. Several of the young men are now in training or have received their wings.

The program will continue its recruiting activities. On Friday Jan. 2 the show will present a radio adaptation of the movie "I Wanted Wings."

Previews of the Theater of the Air operettas on W-G-N Mutual are to be presented two days in advance of each production. At 11:45 a. m. next Thursday, Harold Turner will play excerpts from "Eileen" to be given at 8 p. m. the following Saturday. Bits of the story will be told each week.

News and notes: Dinah Shore has been arguing for the inclusion of a drummer in the orchestra supporting her singing on Sunday evenings to bolster the rhythm section. Her sponsor gave her one for Christmas. . . . Bonnie Baker, who rose to fame with her revival of "Oh, Johnny, Oh" a couple of seasons back, expects to part company with Orrin Tucker and his band next February. . . . Lum and Abner's second movie, just completed, has been retitled "The Bashful Bachelor." It is to be released next month.

Kay Kyser will be grand marshal for the famed Tournament of Roses parade—but not till the war is over. This year's Pasadena fête was canceled because of the war but Kay has been invited to serve if and when the affair is revived. Kyser is about ready to start work on another picture, "My Favorite Spy" in which Ellen Drew will be the leading lady. Miss Drew will make a guest appearance on the CBS Radio Theater at 5 p. m. Sunday in, "Wings for the Ladies."

Guy Lombardo has a new songstress with his orchestra. She is Rosemarie Lombardo, his 16 year old sister. There are three more Lombardo brothers, Carmen, Leibert and Victor, in the band.

TWO BABY PANDAS REACH U.S. AFTER TRIP FROM CHINA

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 25 (AP).—Two rare baby giant pandas, captured in wild mountain regions of China, have arrived in San Francisco en route to New York City. The pandas, a male and a female, will be flown soon to New York and placed in the Bronx zoo. They are gifts of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and Mme. H. H. Kung to American children for their aid to China relief.

John Tee-Van, a staff member of the New York Zoölogical society, brought along two cases of live bamboo shoots to nourish the pandas until they become accustomed to a new fare of orange juice, milk, honey, and raw eggs.

Baby giant pandas, a rarity even in China, the only place where they are found, live in an almost impenetrable bamboo forest of the China-Tibetan border mountains.

CAMP FORREST TAKES A RECESS FOR CHRISTMAS

Camp Forrest, Tenn., Dec. 25.—The camp celebrated Christmas here today as training for war was recessed. Camp headquarters and 33d division headquarters enjoyed a half holiday yesterday and only those assigned to necessary administrative details were on duty today.

The 33d division's regimental bands toured the camp and nearby towns of Tullahoma, Manchester, Shelbyville, and Winchester, playing and singing carols. At the service club there was a 25 foot Christmas tree and two Christmas trees flanked the flagpole at headquarters.

U.S. EASES LAW, LETS SANTA FLY TO LIGHTHOUSES

Boston, Mass., Dec. 25.—(AP)—Wartime restrictions on private flights were relaxed today to allow New England's flying Santa Claus to keep faith as a package laden airplane carried cheer to lonely islands and lighthouses along the coast. Some time ago Santa sent word that he might be grounded, but army and navy officials at the last minute authorized the flight.

At 76, Evangeline Booth Takes a Horseback Ride

Hartsdale, N. Y., Dec. 25 (AP).—Gen. Evangeline Booth, retired international commander of the Salvation Army, took a horseback ride on her 76th birthday today to prove she was still "young in spirit, young in action, and young in work. My only regret," she said, "is that I can't double my life, that I haven't two lives to give to God and humanity."

Honored at Supper-Dance

Miss Joan Peabody, who made her debut at a tea in Lake Forest last June, was the special guest at a supper-dance given last night at the Casino by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard B. Peabody.

One of the most ornamental parties of the Christmas season was the Howard B. Peabodys' supper-dance last night at the Casino club for their debutante daughter, Miss Joan. The trio received before a silver screen festooned with pink balsam garlands caught up in Regency fashion with clusters of glistening silver balls. The pillars of the ballroom were draped with more pink balsam swags and polished metal balls, and stylized Christmas trees with grenadine colored metallic branches were grouped in pairs about the floor. In the fountain room, where supper was served, the tables were heaped with silver and dull pink balls and garlands of silver sprayed pine.

The debutante wore a lovely period gown made from the last Duchess pink petal rose satin that Molyneux of London had on hand. To match the large satin roses appliqued on the skirt, she carried three giant white cabbage roses. At the waist of her white crêpe and fringe gown, Mrs. Peabody pinned a cluster of pale pink camellias.

Your Movieland Correspondent Picks Some Bests of the Year

Looking at Hollywood

By John Chapman

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 25.—It's Christmas and it's near the end of the year, so here are a few Bests of the Year from your movie reporter. The opinions are his own and have been hacked out of a stubborn and often foolish skull. Any resemblance to anybody else's ideas will be miraculously coincidental.

Best picture—"Citizen Kane." It has been a year of splendid movies and a choice has been hard to make, but "Kane" edges past several others. It has bold originality, but is not freakish, and it is a masterpiece of careful picture making in which sight, sound, story, and performances are made into a whole of remarkable unity.

Best male performances—Fredric March as the minister in "One Foot in Heaven," Gary Cooper as Sergeant York, Walter Huston as the devil in "All that Money Can Buy." Huston just can't do a bad thing on stage or screen; March tops his career in "Heaven," and Cooper is another who can't be bad. Soon he'll be playing Lou Gehrig and after that the rôle of Jordan in "For Whom the Bell Tolls"—so he'll be in the high lists again in 1942.

Walter Huston.

Best female performances—There aren't any really outstanding ones like Ginger Rogers' and Katharine Hepburn's last year, but Ida Lupino's "Ladies in Retirement," Martha Scott's "Cheers for Miss Bishop," and Bette Davis' "The Little Foxes" are among my favorites.

Outstanding comedians—Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. They are the box-office phenomenon of

Two Betrothals Are Announced at Yule Parties

BY JUDITH CASS.

CUPID was not pushed into the background by Santa Claus, and at least two engagement announcements resulted from parties yesterday.

At a tea in their home in Hubbard Woods Mr. and Mrs. Marcus D. Richards announced the engagement of their daughter, Marie Louise, to Gilbert L. Watson II., son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius B. Watson of Winnetka.

Miss Richards attended the North Shore Country Day school and was graduated from Smith college last June. She is now studying at the Winnetka Graduate Teachers college and teaching at the Country Day school. She made her debut at a tea-dance at the Indian Hill club in 1938. Mr. Watson attended the North Shore Country Day school, the Hill school, and Yale university. He is engaged in business in Akron, O. No date has been set for the wedding.

The small party that Miss Mary Helen Moore gave at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Moore of Glencoe, celebrated her birthday anniversary as well as Christmas, and turned out to be an announcement party, too. Mr. and Mrs. Moore made known that their daughter is engaged to Robert Adam Vested, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Vested of Chicago.

Miss Moore was graduated from the Roycemore school and Wellesley college. Mr. Vested is a graduate of the Roxbury school and Yale university. The wedding is planned for February.

Tea-Dance to Introduce Miss Betty Mead Hartz.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Homer Hartz of Lake Shore drive will present their only daughter, Betty Mead, at a tea-dance from 4 to 7 o'clock today at the Woman's Athletic club. A clipped hedge will divide the ballroom into two sections, one for dancing and one for tea.

Miss Cicely Getz is here from Moline, Ill., for the party. Miss Hartz's assistants will be Miss Frances Connell, Miss Leonore Cudahy, Miss Barbara McNulty, Miss Peggy Nicholson, Miss Annie Lawrie Ryerson, Miss Angeline Johnson, Miss Tanisse Twyman, Miss Jeanne Stenson, Miss Rosalind and Miss Mary Stark, Miss Terry Gordon, and the debutante's cousin, Miss Ann Mead Payne. The Hartzes have invited the assistants and their escorts to be their guests at dinner later.

The debutante's brother, William Homer Hartz Jr., won't be among the beaux at the dance, for he is in service as an ensign in the navy.

Shirley Hopkins Making Debut at Dinner-Dance.

The debutantes will get out their dancing slippers again tonight for Miss Shirley Hopkins' debut dinner dance in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman. Miss Hopkins and her mother, Mrs. Farley Hopkins, will be welcoming guests from 8 o'clock on. Dinner will be served at tables clustered around the dance floor. The debutante's young cousin, Miss Patricia Hopkins, has come from New York to share in the festivities.

One of the gayest parties for Miss Lois Mason and Miss Lois Pittman to be noted in the cousins' memory books will be a holiday dance which the Ayres Boals are giving tonight in their Winnetka home. The young guests will start arriving at 10 o'clock for the festivities. Before that time there'll be several dinner parties, including Miss Catryna Nevius' for Debutante Sally Glaser in the Nevius home and Miss Ann Davis Johnson's in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Johnson.

Miss Mason is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic O. Mason of Winnetka. Her cousin, who is the daughter of Mrs. Louvia Pittman of Winnetka and Knowles Pittman of Chicago, is not making a formal debut.

Luncheon Will Be Given for Julie Goodman Today.

Mrs. William O. Kurtz and Mrs. Luther H. Barber will give a mothers' and daughters' luncheon at 1 o'clock today at the Indian Hill club for Debutante Julie Goodman.

Hot mulled wine and carol singing are as much a tradition at the Theodore Holms' day after Christmas open house as the party itself. The Holms will receive their friends in their home in East Division street between 4 and 7 o'clock. Their daughter and

"Here's to the United States," Miss Jean MacLellan and Robert Hastey might have been saying when this picture was taken at the South Shore Country club recently. Every one's serious thoughts are for the nation today, but in almost every family, club, and other organization there is no curtailment of entertainment for the young during this holiday season. What the future will bring, no one knows, so today must be gay and merry for the boys and girls who, all too soon in wartime, become men and women. The South Shore is having a junior ball tonight and a children's party next Monday afternoon. [Frank Photo.]

Tonight's Night of Parties for Young People

Bright balloons will be the decorations for the Fortnightly Christmas party tonight which will be preceded by a dinner party which Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson Jr. will give for her daughter, Anne Wilson. Traditionally, all the young people who attended the "Fort" dances before going away to school are invited to the Christmas fête, so tonight's party will be a real reunion.

Another group of young people will compare notes on their schools and activities at the Lake Forest Junior assembly at the Onwentsia club tonight. Mrs. Keith Carpenter is making the arrangements.

In a bower of Christmas trees, tinsel, and mistletoe, teen age sons and daughters of members of the Exmoor club and their guests, will dance tonight at the club's Christmas "teen hop." The Mason Armstrongs, Mr. and Mrs. William Bromstedt, Mr. and Mrs. John Newey, and the Earl Sprouls will be hosts and hostesses.

Miss Peggy Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bradley of Evanston, will entertain at a snack party before a Roycemore school dance at the Camellia house tonight.

A supper and winter sports party will be given at the Glen View club tonight by Miss Ann Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Johnson of Evanston, and Miss Margaret Merrick, daughter of the Clinton Merricks, also of Evanston. Both young women attend the Roycemore school.

Miss Josephine Pope and Miss Elizabeth Shorey will entertain at a tea-dance at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Oak Park Country club. Miss Pope, who studied at Pine Manor, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Austin Pope of River Forest. Miss Shorey's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Everett Shorey of Oak Park. She attends Wellesley college.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MACKAY.

Subject for Thought.

A young usherette, in fact the only usherette in a small moving picture theater in a small town, suddenly was confronted with an emergency. Her boy friend, the movie operator, was taken ill and the show had begun, so there was nothing for her to do but take over. Of course, she had watched him operate the machine from time to time. The trouble was she had never paid much attention to the order in which the reels were run.

She did her best. Afterwards she strolled out into the lobby to hear the comments. They were indeed gratifying. "Such an interesting picture," they were saying, "not at all like most pictures. Did you notice it went back and took up the thread?" "Yes, and altho you might not quite understand it," they were saying, "still it gave you something to think about."

It gave her something to think about . . . which was—in what order had she run the reels?

Sayings of Sally.

Career Girls' Christmas.

Four young women—two artists and two copy writers—who have an advertising studio—are holding open house this week. Those who'd like to see how the career girl lives, and works, should wangle an invitation.

The studio is in an old building with spacious connecting rooms and white marble fireplaces. There's a fire crackling away, and wreaths against the whiteness of the marble, and Christmas cards arranged on the mantel.

But the Christmas tree is the real attraction, decorated not at all as any tree you have ever seen. Instead of the usual ornaments, it is trimmed only with things connected with the girls' work; lace buttons and rickrack, with triangles and T squares, pencils, brushes, and pens made out of metallic paper. And hanging on the tree are little symbolical ornaments characterizing their various accounts—miniature milk bottles for a milk account—toy money for a financial account—paper doll clothes for a dress account.

It's cute! And it manages, somehow, to be satisfactorily shimmery in spite of its business significance.

Fingertip Personality.

Types of nails are divided, according to the booklet, into:

Creative—Nails kept short, following the natural oval shape of the fingertips. Polish completely covering the nails.

Patrician—Nails in a modified oval, hairline tips, and the natural moons are left completely uncovered. [More practical than either of the other two types.]

Artistic—Slender, elongated, oval shaped. Polish to tips, leaving white moons for effective accent.

Exotic—Long, extreme points. No moons or tips, but a sweep of deep colored polish over entire nail.

Wedding

The marriage of Miss Agnes Cecilia Coleman to John J. McCall took place on Dec. 20 in the Holy Name cathedral. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Donald J. Masterson.

Body Treatment Is Suggested as Way to Tone Up

Thru the LOOKING GLASS

Christmas cash?

Victory bonds, of course, will be your first thought. But we do think it would be permissible to hold out a bit for your own use, especially if you spend it in a fashion that will help you hold fast to serenity and poise. There are people who think that body treatments are the height of extravagance; we emphatically disagree.

Women who work hard and under great tension will find body treatments a good investment not only from the important standpoint of appearance improvement but for health's sweet sake. Working women are notorious jitterers. We're approaching a time when we must all be workers, and we'll need to be calm and healthy. Attractive, too, since the knowledge that we look our best is one of the vital cornerstones of feminine morale. And intelligent care of ourselves is the answer.

Body treatments are restorative when the muscles are tired and the nerves jangled. They're figure normalizers, too, but we consider that of secondary importance. A busy woman who takes one a week isn't self-indulgent. She's being sensible, fortifying herself against the ravages of that particular kind of weariness of body and spirit that is born of working day in and day out. Men can take the grind better than we do; they can relax at the clink of an ice cube any day. We have to work at relaxation, even spend money for it, and it's so terribly important that we should do it if we have the money to spare. ELEANOR NANGLE.

Good Morning!

Well—the big day's over! Turkey's reduced to the pickin's and you've got time to go to a movie, now.

My suggestion is—try the show at the Roosevelt. In this theater you will find two humdinger features . . . "Henry Aldrich for President," which I'll review later, and "Texas"—which is the headliner and a western worth anybody's money.

In it the "Golden Boy" fights again. And wins. AND loses. And smiles! Golly, girls, how he can smile! In it that grand Glenn Ford is his pal, tried and true—who also loves the pal's gal. In it Claire Trevor is the gal. . . . Practically enough said about her, for she does have just about everything. Can't understand what makes the moviemakers so chary of her.

Also in "Texas" is a certain "Doc," who, as played by Edgar Buchanan, is one of the most unusual characters—in a W. C. Fields sort of way—that you've encountered on the screen. Amusing in a fumbling, bumbling fashion and, after a while, sinister, in a dull, deadly way. . . . I'll do a heap of watching for Mr. Buchanan in the future.

Story's locale is Texas, right after the Civil war. It has to do with cattle rustling and plenty other things that ain't as they ought to be. It packs suspense and surprise on account of so many folks swarming with the devils and singing with the angels.

I could give you more of a lowdown on the tale, but I'm not that lowdown—especially just after Christmas.

But will you, PLEASE, take my word for it—that Texas has what you're looking for? Real human appeal. Laughs! Punch. Fast action and swell panoramic effects. AND, my little ones, one of the best written scenarios that ever loped off a script writer's desk!

See you tomorrow.

Front VIEWS and PROFILES

Carol Tour.

We wish you had been with us when we followed the Great Lakes Dredge and Philharmonic society on its annual Christmas carol tour, up Astor street, over to State, and back to Cedar. Every house which had a candle in a window was treated to at least one song. Most of the carolers wore green or red top hats and mufflers to match and carried lanterns. Rugged individualists: John W. Root, in a red and black plaid cap with earmuffs. John R. Winterbotham, hatless [frankly, it was a bit warm]. Lieut. Sam Pace in full uniform. Herbert Stratford, who could only join the singers at their last stop indoors because he was just getting over a bad cold, in a tweed suit and blue tie.

As we watched from across the street, we could hear the strains of "Annie Laurie" coming from the Joseph T. Ryersons' home and could see a gay crowd of young midshipmen inside. At the Charles D. Freys' the doors were thrown open and we glimpsed Capt. Gail Borden [of the air corps] hailing the carolers. From a fourth floor window of a State street home three little heads bobbed up, and later we could see the children clapping. Finally, we scurried into the Pump Room just ahead of the carolers to see them troop in singing. There, they finished off their round with a rousing drinking song to the cheers of all the diners. The complete silence, while Louis C. Sudler led "Silent Night" to a soft humming accompaniment, gave us a lump in the throat. More next year!

Sharp Turns.

How about the young lady [E. S.] who got into such a trance over the carolers that she grazed three cars on Astor street? She was awfully sorry and allowed as how Astor street must have really been planned for the carriage trade—literally. We know a certain hairpin turn in Lake Forest that decidedly requires either a jointed car or a horse and buggy to negotiate.

Penna. Dutch.

A line from "Papa Is All" might apply to a certain mustachioed man we've heard about: "It'd be wonderful died he once." By the way, did you know that there is a colony near Holy Hill [noted Franciscan cathedral in Wisconsin] called Platte Dutch which is closely related to the Pennsylvania Dutch?

Abbrvts.

In case you're literal minded, here are some abbreviations to toy with: Colo. Spgs., Prc. and Press., hdkfs. [we know that's a common one but it's always fun]. Add inversions: Sal Sagev, which is the name of a hotel in Nevada.

Anchors Aweigh.

The "Louisiana Purchase" company gave a special performance Tuesday for 1,400 navy boys. Zorina says they never had a better audience. The boys only erred on the side of overenthusiasm. Between the acts, the chorus girls went into the aisles to greet the boys personally, and Zorina wanted to go, too. So she did. Understating a little, she was popular!

'Student Prince' Revival Offers Enjoyable Fare

"THE STUDENT PRINCE."
Operetta in a prolog and four acts. Music by Sigmund Romberg. Book and lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly. Settings by Watson Barratt. Costumes by Stage Costumes, Inc. Production staged by Edward J. Scanlon. Presented by the Messrs. Shubert in the Grand Opera house, Thursday evening, Dec. 25, 1941.

THE CAST.

Prince Karl Franz	Robert Davis
Kathie	Barbara Scully
Lutz	Detmar Poppen
Hubert	William Kent
Grand Duchess Anastasia	Nina Varela
Princess Margaret	Jay Presson
Dr. Engel	Lloyd Harris
Ruder	Walter Johnson
Toni	Nathaniel Sack
Gretchen	Joanne Tree
Capt. Tarnitz	William Castle
Also many others.

BY CECIL SMITH.

The current revival of "The Student Prince," the second to come our way within the calendar year of 1941, does quite well by the tunes and as well as can reasonably be expected by the fading story. If you are a pushover for Sigmund Romberg's remarkable succession of singable, lilting melodies—as I confess I am, within clearly defined limits—you will enjoy a visit to the Grand Opera house during the holidays.

In most particulars the performance is brighter than the one we saw last March. Robert Davis and Barbara Scully bring appealing youth to the leading romantic parts of Karl Franz and Kathie, and the members of the male chorus are now in full command of the vocal parts and the necessary routines of marching, stein-raising, and general student corps demeanor. It would be stretching the truth, of course, to pretend that any performance of "The Student Prince" creates a believeable illusion, but at least most of the present performers are quite willing to pretend that it does.

Mr. Davis, who was a member of the "Meet the People" company a year ago, acts the rôle of the prince with unusual distinction, entering into his student experiences at Heidelberg with disarming freshness and enthusiasm, surviving the later scene of his unwelcome betrothal to Princess Margaret without becoming unduly petulant, and making the maudlin soliloquy accompanying the dream tableaux of Heidelberg seem fairly manly and reasonable. He sings rather naively, but with an attractive voice quality.

Eighteen year old Barbara Scully, blonde and pert and lively, sings Kathie's music with a brittle and metallic little voice that is surprisingly effective. Detmar Poppen and Nina Varela bring the expected vaudeville atmosphere of roughouse to their low comedy parts. Jay Presson is a decorative Princess. As Dr. Engel, Lloyd Harris is disappointing both vocally and dramatically. The other parts are completely handled. The settings and costumes are what you have come to expect in a revival of "The Student Prince."

The performance was distinguished by an offstage note of romance. Mr. Davis and Miss Presson, refusing to follow the plot of "The Student Prince," were married here on Wednesday evening and were receiving the congratulations of their surprised fellow actors last night.

Here Are Tips to Help Fill the Lunch Box

BY MARY MEADE.

[Copyright: 1941: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mothers of school youngsters aren't the only ones who must fix lunch boxes these days. Wives of working men now, more than ever, must get up a few minutes earlier, or extend the after-dinner preparation just a little longer. More men than before are carrying their lunches. What with all the defense plants and defense industry, many men either haven't a place to buy lunch or haven't enough time to go out for it.

We can take a lesson from Amelia Earhart, the late great woman flyer, who took canned fruit juices along on flights. When she needed them, she would punch holes in the can with an ice pick, slip in a straw, and there she had her vitamins.

You may not want to include a small can of fruit juice every day. Sometimes it will be handier to put an apple, banana, or orange in the box. But you will like the variety of juices put up in small sizes: tomato, grape, orange, prune, grapefruit, pineapple and apple, to mention a few.

It's difficult to think of many ways to include vegetables. The necessity for eating them out of hand limits variety. Look to the relish tray for suggestions. All kinds of pickles, carrots, celery, raw turnip squares, radishes, and olives are the usual ones.

If lunch boxes can be kept in a cool place, chances of these vegetables losing their zip are few. Don't forget to put in salt.

Consider something hot. Whatever it is must go into the vacuum bottle. Most men like coffee with the meal. Sometimes, for variety, send along steaming soup. Check thick soups off the list, because they aren't easy to handle. It must be a broth of some kind, either beef or chicken being favored. Thin vegetable soup that pours easily and drinks easily is worthwhile, too.

Just a suggestion. Cut olives and mix with cottage cheese. Place in a small covered jar and include a paper fork. Waldorf and potato salad are year 'round favorites sent along in the same way.

Save a chicken drumstick or wing if you can. That is ideal fare. Put a hearty slice of meat from last night's roast into sandwiches, or grind up leftover ham to concoct a delicious spread.

If it's a peanut butter sandwich, tuck in a leaf of lettuce. It won't be garden fresh when he eats it, but the sandwich will still taste good. For palatability, spread some mayonnaise with peanut butter or cheese. It makes a moister sandwich.

Vary the kind of breads, too. Plain raisin bread with butter requires no filling. If you are lucky enough to be able to buy salt rising bread, use it now and then.

Many bakeries have a delightful, rolled, cinnamon bread. You can also make this yourself. Rye bread is good spread with cinnamon, sugar and butter, good for cheese of all kinds, too.

If he likes whole wheat, give him whole wheat. If not, use enriched white bread.

Fruit pies and cream pies made with milk are desirable for dessert since lunches often lean heavily on starchy foods. Make a filled fruit cookie and he'll bring home favorable comments when work is done. A fruit upside-down cake will meet with his approval, too.

THE Kitchen Kibitzer

by MARIAN CARTER

A look over the shoulder of the kitchen manager in an attempt to speed, lighten and add some novelty to her daily routine.

It's going to be very hard to get green tea, which is produced mostly in Japan and Japanese dominated areas. To be patriotic we'd better stick to black tea, anyway, for most of it comes from the territories of our allies.

Don't drain the liquid from the canned green beans. Use it for the sauce—make a white sauce using that liquid instead of part of the milk. Good, and it saves those vitamins.

If it's calves liver, don't scald it before you broil it. Beef, pork or lamb liver may be scalded. Removes any faint bitterness.

Beat cake batter smooth, but leave those lumps in the muffins. They'll bake out. You'll get "tunnels" if you give muffin batter a good beating. And who wants to eat muffins with big holes in 'em, I ask you?

"Afraid" to use garlic? Then maybe you should get yourself a bottle or jar of garlic salt. As little flavor as you like without a smell on your hands.

Put the oil from the tuna right into the loaf. Or use it as a basis for white sauce for the fish. We mustn't waste anything edible, these days!

I hope 'twasn't you I heard asking the market man for "a nice piece of steak." What kind of steak—flank, round, porterhouse, cube or rib? Makes a difference, indeed yes! Why leave it to the butcher?

Cook those eggs very gently in just a little butter, and put a cover on the pan. If you don't let 'em cook too long, they'll be tender and handsome. Put one on a slice of toast and pour cheese or tomato sauce over it. Makes a good lunch.

And when you cook eggs in bacon rings, partially cook the bacon first, so that it will be well done by the time the eggs have cooked.

Dear me! Do you still measure coffee by the "heaping tablespoonful"? That's no way to get a standard brew. Two heaping tablespoonfuls never are the same size. Two level tablespoons are. Two level ones per 8 ounce cup of water make good coffee.

College Shops Are Deadfalls for Yule Cash

BY REA SEEGER.

All Christmas checks, money orders, actual cash, and merchandise certificates, important loot from yesterday's fun, will get into quick circulation. Especially tempting are the finds in the college shop showings, going strong during the holidays, the first aid idea for vacationing college girls.

In these showings are all the newest ideas in clever costume accessories with which to rejuvenate a slightly jaded wardrobe . . . new things in color for good contrast duty on dark clothes, brand new blouses, fuzzy and not so fuzzy sweaters, important winter lounging robes, sleeping gowns and pajamas of warm cozy thin wools or all the smart cotton flannels made for double duty, that of lounging outfit or sleeping in a chilly bedroom.

The sports clothes for all winter sports are also on display, very professional appearing ski outfits, from the new one piece affairs to the streamlined ski pants and the short skirts for the veteran skiers. All the brighest and newest skating clothes are star attractions, also greatcoats of wool with fur linings, or the swagger jackets of stunning warm wool lined with contrasting colored padded and quilted stuff or swanky fluffy white sheepskin. Mittens, socks, sweaters of brilliant hue in stunning new Norwegian designs, or the dozens and dozens of sweaters in pastel shades offer plenty of excuse for spending all extra shekels.

What takes the best adjectives, and incidentally most of the money, are the frothy confections of net, lace, satin, silk, and jersey airily masquerading as ball gowns, dinner dresses, and dancing dresses. Never have there been so many romantic heart breakers. All of the high fashion and most popular finds feature extremely wide and full skirts, scant bodice tops, all kinds of beau-catching ideas like ruffles, sashes, feather trim, lace covered bodice tops, thousands of twinkling rhinestones sequins, nailhead trim, beaded and pearl embroidery, and the added swish of taffeta petticoats or underslips.

And as if this weren't enough, see the stunning new wool and tweed ensembles of two-piece suit and topcoat [some with fur collars] with which the returning student can stage an effective entrance to the campus. Hustle down to the revamped college shops, all you lucky girls with extra money, for these in-between collections are well worth

FASHIONS

By ANGELA

Suits are practically standard equipment in every American woman's wardrobe these days. No matter what the season of the year, there's a suit to make you smart and neat and comfortable. This winter happens to be a pastel season. Gay plaids, soft herringbone tweeds, and clear, smooth gabardines brighten the country landscape and the city boulevard. It's a gay world. Wear them under your heavy coat in cold winter weather, or "just so" next spring when the added warmth of a coat isn't necessary.

The first model wears a light weight wool gabardine so sleek and slim it fits under a coat as easily as a dress. The slightly fitted jacket buttons right up close to the neck, ending in a youthful turndown collar. Comes in light blue, aqua, rose, and a color called nude.

Gray and yellow is a color combination favored by all and just as generally becoming. It makes the simple plaid suit in the center with the box plaited skirt and the popular long jacket. No bias cut here. The skirt is made on the straight of the material, providing a little relief from the classic diagonal cut.

Still another variety in both fabric and design in this particular collection is the herringbone suit, distinguished by the tie belt which gives a little blouse effect and a softening touch to the otherwise severe design. The color is a rosy tan.

son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Harding Emmerson Davies, and Mrs. Holm's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Gale Jewett, are here from the east. Mrs. Davies is appearing here in "Papa Is All" under her maiden name, Celeste Holm. Mr. Davies flew in from New York on Christmas eve. Milton Edwards, organist and music critic, will direct the carol singing at the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burgess Snyder of Gary are entertaining with a tea at the Arts club today at 5 o'clock for their house guests, the Bernard J. Mullaneys of Fitzwilliam, N. H., and the Stanley Sewards of Cleveland. Mr. and Mrs. Mullaney, who used to live in Chicago, will visit Mrs. Welch Dickinson next week.

The Civic Opera house will be the destination of balletomanes tonight when the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo opens its ninth annual Christmas visit to Chicago. Among those who plan to be there to see "Labyrinth," "Vienna: 1814," and "Gaite Parisienne," are the William B. Cudahys, Mrs. Merrill Hubbard, the junior Joseph C. Beldens, the Gaylord Donnelleys, the Daggett Harveys, Durand Smith, and Thomas Tyler.

The Edward Morris family will have a real vacation during this holiday season, for Mr. and Mrs. Morris and their sons leave today for a 10 day stay at Sea Island, Ga. Ted, the soldier of the family, came home on Christmas eve to have Christmas with his family and will spend the rest of his leave at Sea Island with his mother and father and brothers, Bill and Nelson.

Mrs. Merrill Hubbard and her two daughters enjoyed an old fashioned Christmas in their Lake Forest home, which Mrs. Hubbard reopened for the holidays. Miss Elizabeth has returned from Foxcroft, and her older sister, Miss Marie Merrill, is having a four day recess from her nurses' training course at St. Luke's hospital.

Help a Child Look Forward to Bedtime

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.
[Copyright: 1941: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.]

What should be such a pleasant, natural habit for children, going easily to sleep, often becomes difficult and fraught with tension and even with emotion.

Spanking is out of the question, and direct dealing just doesn't belong in your bag of tricks for this age, nor does it work. We must achieve our results in this, as in so many behaviors, by indirect approach.

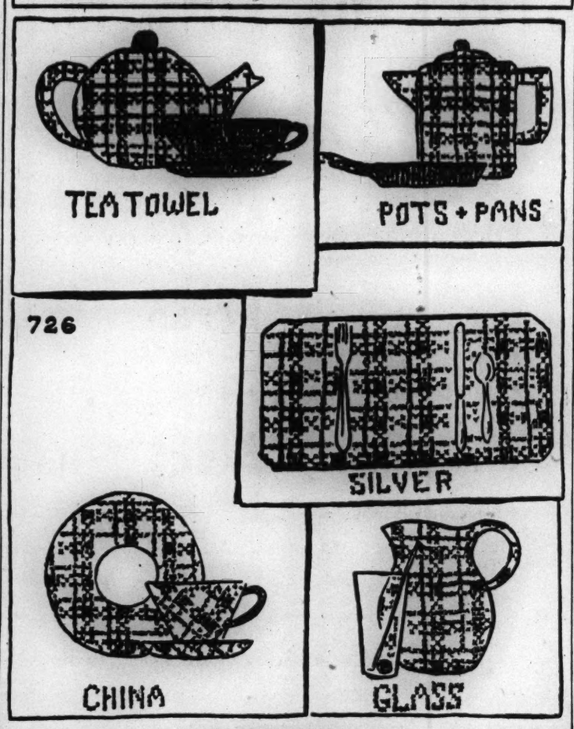
How, then, shall we go about clearing up these habits that interfere with sweet, relaxed sleep?

Somehow or other, you've got to begin to cure your child by taking yourself in hand. You won't succeed in breaking him of these habits if you're wrought up, or if you look at your child with a feeling of distaste or blame. Having made this decision, look at the whole day of your small child. And by his "whole day" is meant not only his various "routines," such as eating, bathing, outing, play and dressing, but also his relationship with his mother, or whoever has him in charge for the 24 hours.

See that your child lives vigorously. Busy, happy hours of satisfying play, with lots of fresh air, make a child healthfully tired when nap or bedtime comes, and so less inclined to acquire those physical habits. The discontent that comes with boredom or repressed energy sometimes expresses itself in these, to us, strange behaviors.

Making going to bed a pleasant time brings a contented state of mind in a child, which is another thing that helps him to go to sleep easily, and so prevents the aimless restlessness that is not desirable and sometimes results in the habits we're describing. Going to bed should be, and can be, something he looks forward to. This doesn't necessarily mean that it should be a long drawn out affair, but a bustling session with a hurried, tired mother doesn't lead favorably to the adventure of sleep.

Five Cross-Stitched Motifs



BY NANCY CABOT.

Kitchen or tea towels embroidered with this attractive cross-stitch design will lend added chic to an otherwise utilitarian object. These five motifs are so designed that they create an appearance of applique work, and range in size from 4x5 to 4x7 inches. Complete directions and a suggested color chart are included.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the five cross-stitch motifs, No. 726, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Difference in Age Barrier to Marriage

BY DORIS BLAKE.
[Copyright: 1941: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.]

"She is having difficulty at home," the young swain reports, "because of the fact that we are of opposite religious faiths and nationalities. Her folks dislike me. The girl and I are compelled to meet always secretly. This strikes me as being very foolish.

"At first this girl, whom I met on vacation this year," the boy continues, "wanted to go out with others, to which I agreed, but it hasn't lessened my love for her a bit. In fact, I am getting more deeply in love every day. I know the girl loves me, but she says there are too many difficulties in our way; too many things against us, including our age difference. I have a good job with future prospects, now, but the girl tells me that she thinks it better we do not see each other any more. But I'm miserable over the whole thing. What can I do to prove to her that I'm right in asking her to continue seeing me? Or, do you agree I'm right? —Jake."

Well, Jake, you're just going thru a period of growing up into really mature manhood thru which countless of your brothers have gone before you. You've just been lucky in your contact with a girl who sees the folly of your companionship from the romantic point of view. You see, a girl of 24 is ages and ages older than a boy of 19, no matter how you may argue. Add to this difference your opposing faiths and your different nationality traits, you'll later recognize the girl is wise in discouraging your attentions. But there's always a hasty remedy for your ailment, Jake. It is to find another girl quickly, and one more nearly your own age.

According to Culbertson

[Copyright: 1941: By Ely Culbertson.]

Where game contracts are concerned, the great consideration is the solidity of the combined hands. In slams this same solidity is, of course, prerequisite, but, in addition, another vital factor enters the picture. I refer, of course, to controls. It is quite possible to set up hands with 16 or 17 playing tricks that cannot make a slam because of the absence of two vital aces. Note how North, in the following deal, contracted for an unmakable slam because he forgot all about "duplication of values."

NORTH
♠ Q J 10 4 3
♥ K 8
♣ K Q J 10

WEST
♦ 10 7 2

EAST
♥ Q J 6 4 3
♦ A 8 5 3

SOUTH
♠ A K 7 5
♥ A 10 9 2
♦ K Q J 4
♣ 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 no trump	Pass	6 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

*Four-Five No Trump Convention.

North's final bid was quite unjustified. Surely he could not look to South for a better hand than he actually held, and whether the four no trump bid represented two aces and the king of spades, or three aces, a slam would be far from "cold." In the first named event there would be two aces off the hand. In the second, South, with the spade ace, club ace, and heart ace, might lose two diamonds off the reel, or, even if he had the diamond control instead of the club, might have it knocked out, subsequently to lose a diamond and a club, or might lose a spade finesse to the king. The absence of aces in North's hand should have induced caution, especially since North had expressed all his strength with his first jump raise. Since North was unable to answer the four no trump convention by an ace showing bid, he should have contented himself with signing off at five spades and leaving any slam activity to his partner.

Amazingly enough, however, South fulfilled the atrocious contract. West, afraid to open the club ace because of his length in the suit, led a trump. This was won in dummy, and now declarer, seeing that nothing could save him but great luck, led a diamond toward his own hand. East could hardly be blamed for ducking. For all he knew, declarer might have a guess to make with the K-J. Declarer carefully selected the card to play on this trick that would have the most chance of deceiving West if the diamond ace were on his right. He played the diamond queen, and to West this looked as if he were finessing with the A-Q against the king. The club then was led toward dummy. West hopped up and, after an agony of indecision, returned a heart! Obviously, declarer now was home. He won, drew trumps, and discarded his three remaining diamonds on the three good clubs in dummy.

On the face of it, it appears as tho the defenders were woefully weak, but in fairness it is difficult to criticize the play of either one. Surely East could not be expected to hop up with the diamond ace, and after he ducked and the queen won, how could West tell that declarer had the heart ace instead of the diamond ace?

It should be noted that declarer's play was the only possible chance for success. It was vital to steal a diamond trick before establishing the club suit because, with the club ace making its appearance, East would, of course, hasten to cash the diamond ace.

Your Handwriting

BY SHIRLEY SPENCER.

The handwriting of Craig Rice, mystery story writer, slants in every direction. Looking at a page of it reminds one of the White Knight who rode off in all directions.

What does it mean when a writing slants this way and that way? Well, the angle of inclination in writing is like an emotional indicator. That doesn't mean that only those with a slant that represents a 45 degree angle to the right are warm-hearted. Such a writer has no inhibition, that's all. A backhand writer may be just as passionate, but may appear cold—to some people. So when writing registers every degree east and west and never rests on any angle, you may be sure the writer is a very impressionable and highly emotional person with changeable moods.

RIGGS BATTLES PERRY; KOVACS OPPOSES BUDGE

Tennis Stars in Pro Debuts Tonight.

New York, Dec. 25 [Special].—Frank Kovacs vs. Don Budge; Bobby Riggs vs. Fred Perry. That's the line-up of matches for tomorrow night when the world's top ranking professional tennis players open a nation-wide tour in Madison Square Garden.

The Riggs-Perry match will involve the world professional champion [Perry] and the American amateur champion [Riggs]. Riggs defeated Kovacs for the title in the Forest Hills finals in September. Both boys turned professional in November.

The Budge-Kovacs battle, while not involving titles, may provide the most spectacular tennis of the night.

Bobby Riggs. Frank Kovacs.

Budge, despite his 1941 defeats by Perry during a slump in which illness played a part, still is regarded as the world's greatest tennis player. Kovacs, despite his losses to Riggs in 1941, owns the American indoor title and his whole game, based on speed and attack, is augmented by the fast canvas surface on which all matches of the tour will be played.

Riggs Is the Smallest.

Both Budge and Kovacs possess devastating backhands. The match, quite likely, will develop into a hard hitting duel off the backhand, with both men capable of moving in to the net at the slightest opening.

The Riggs-Perry tussle, on the other hand, may devolve into a cautious backcourt engagement. Riggs is the only small man in the cast. He stands only 5 feet, 7 inches, weighs less than 160 pounds, and depends on change of spin and accurate placement to break up his opponents' games.

Consequently, if Riggs seizes command of the match, he probably will softball Perry's backhand in an effort to outsteady the former British Davis Cup star, who now is an American citizen.

Play Best Three of Five.

Since Riggs and Kovacs were 1-2 on the amateur rankings for 1941, and Perry and Budge occupied similar positions in the professional rankings, the opening match really brings about, after all these years, the much discussed "pro-amateur open tournament." Only the match will be conducted under professional auspices instead of, as contemplated, under the check rein of the United States Lawn tennis association.

The opening singles matches will be best of five sets. This system will be adhered to in subsequent matches in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Chicago [tentative date Jan. 9]. However, the card will be reduced to best of three set matches when the tour opens a series of one-night stands thru the middle and far west.

Payoff on Percentage.

The tour's promoter, Alexis Thompson, Philadelphia sports enterpreneur, has evolved a payoff system new to professional tennis which is designed to keep the players on their toes in each match. None of the four players will receive fixed salaries—altho both Riggs and Kovacs were guaranteed a $25,000 minimum to induce them to turn pro.

The final payoff will be on a percentage basis with the round robin winner receiving 37 per cent of the net receipts and the other players receiving correspondingly smaller percentages in proportion to their final standings.

The system also will be carried over into the doubles match which will conclude each performance. The doubles match will involve an outright cash prize each evening. Also, doubles lineups will be changed each evening, precluding the possibility of two players teaming permanently and dominating the play night after night.

CHICAGO GETS NATIONAL FIGURE SKATING MEET

New York, Dec. 25 [Special].—The 1942 national figure skating meet originally scheduled for Berkeley, Cal., has been transferred to Chicago, Joseph K. Savage, chairman of the competitions committee, said tonight.

Mr. Savage said that reports indicated that parents of many possible competitors were unwilling to permit their children to visit the Pacific coast during the present wartime conditions.

After considering pleas of several clubs, the newly formed midwestern committee recommended that the event be awarded to the Figure Skating club of Chicago, to be held on the original dates of Feb. 19, 20 and 21.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD.

MANAGERS of the other seven American league clubs are reported shopping for southpaw pitchers as a result of Bucky Harris' announcement that the 1942 Senators will offer a batting order which includes five left handed hitters in a row. . . . Bucky's rivals figure that any lad who can get a ball to the plate with his left hand should handcuff that array. . . . Charles D. Cutter, pioneer automobile manufacturer who died in Detroit recently, was a widely known bicycle racer in his youth. . . . Twelve members of the Fordham football team have applied for admission to the army air corps. . . . Loyola's [Chicago] Ramblers are living up to the name this season. . . . The basketball squad will travel approximately 3,000 miles. . . . In 1923 the Fenger High school quintet defeated Morgan Park High, 3 to 2, in a regulation game, which probably is a record low score. . . . [Aside to Jimmy: Now watch the Wake mail for word from the sharpshooters that Podunk whipped Pineapple Junction, 1 to 0, in overtime.] . . . James Fox, professor of history at Wilson Junior college in Chicago, was a star half back at Haverford college. . . . Arky Vaughan and Babe Phelps, who figured in that recent Pirate-Dodger player swap, were parties of the first and second part in a fist fight on the diamond two years ago. . . . It was a draw. . . . The public takes over the rink for skating after hockey games in Madison Square Garden. . . . In Jimmy Phelan's 12 years at the University of Washington the Huskies won 63 games, lost 37, and tied 8. . . . Cecil Isbell of the Packers threw at least one touchdown pass in 12 consecutive games this year. . . .

When Ben Chapman, now manager of the Richmond club, was asked what he thought of Lou Boudreau's chances with trouble makers in Cleveland next year, he replied: "The only way to handle trouble makers is to treat them as Joe McCarthy did Ben Chapman—get rid of them." . . . Nat Holman, star of the old New York Celtics, is starting his 23d season as coach of the City college basketball team. . . . Both "most valuable players" in the big leagues—Joe DiMaggio and Dolph Camilli—came up from the San Francisco sandlots. . . . As a result of the war Phil Rizzuto of the Yankees may receive a new draft classification. . . . His deferment was for only six months. . . . Coach Bill Edwards has announced that any member of the Detroit Lions caught drinking hard liquor during the 1942 season will be fined $100. . . . Don Faurot's new salary is $10,000, which makes him the most highly paid coach in Missouri's history. . . . Mel Ott is the Giants' 18th manager. . . . Tommy Thomas, former White Sox pitching star and now manager of the Baltimore Orioles, was a Chicago visitor recently and went out to Ted Lyons' new bowling palace on the far south side, confident he would find Ted, long his closest pal, on the premises. . . . He learned that Ted, suffering from a large scale case of claustrophobia, had gone to the wide open spaces of Louisiana for a month's visit with home folks.

These Things I Keep.

The radio blares out a martial tune—
This is no time to feature songs of love,
But still I keep those star-sweet nights in June
With green lips softly gossiping above—

The vision of a late October jaunt,
A wedge of wild things, southbound, streaming by,
Some frost-resisting blossoms still aflaunt—
A copper tree against a cobalt sky.

I'll hold until the time again we meet
The picture of a January day,
The snow—an ermine rug beneath our feet,
The snowflakes—petals from a bride's bouquet.

And so I keep you, tho I let you go,
So bonny in the uniform you wore,
Of course you love me, still I'm proud to know,
In times like these you love your honor more.

—Rosamond B. Olson.

Run, Don't Walk, to Nearest Exit.

A man came home the other day and was introduced to a pretty nurse. "She's very efficient and scientific," his better half said, "and she told me she wouldn't allow any one to kiss the baby while she was near."

"No one would want to," the man murmured.

"Is that so?" snapped his XYL.

"I mean, not while she is near," stuttered the poor fish, trying to be diplomatic.—W9SZW.

P. S.—Arch, we got a new nurse at our house.

REPORTER SEEKS NEW ADJECTIVES FOR HENIE SHOW

Cast Shares Spotlight in Latest Revue.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

You just thought you were charmed by those four earlier Sonja Henie ice revues. Wait till you see the one which opened last night in Chicago stadium with more than 17,000 of the Sonja worshippers on hand to welcome the little skating lady on her annual holiday visit to our excitedly appreciative city.

Personally, we haven't had on a skate for more than 20 years, but we've seen all the Henie extravaganzas and all the Henie movies. We think her current show proves her just as fine a performer as ever and, we think, just a bit more gracious—certainly more tolerant of the ambitions of her associate artists. They can't hope to rival Sonja, perhaps, but it is nice to see everybody have his or her whirl at what he or she can do best. What we are trying to say is that the current revue seems to have better balance than some of its predecessors. You know what we mean if you go to all the ice shows.

Opener Is Patriotic Number.

The revue started off with a smash—a patriotic number which would be exciting even if these weren't war times. "Hats off to Uncle Sammy" is the name of this show opener by 48 members of the ensemble. Right away you were ready to believe the press agent's claims that the costumes of this year's revue cost a cool $72,000 of the $200,000 total expenditure and here it was that the spectator learned that Miss Henie has dozens of tremendously beautiful little gals in her ensemble line.

Immediately after the ensemble had completed its stirring series of red, white, and blue evolutions, Gene Turner, Miss Henie's new partner, also the national figure skating champion, came out for his bow in a solo number. Another serious feature followed Mr. Turner, called "Rendezvous," a pretty arrangement employing four couples.

Stevens Gets the Laughs.

Fourth on the program was one of the most elaborate, and cute, comedy understakings in a Henie show—[Henie shows used to frown on too much comedy, remember]. This first humorous specialty was by Jeff Stevens, English comic, accompanied by five big pink elephants and one baby pink elephant, a fine skit, even if you aren't partial to pink elephants under ordinary circumstances.

And still no Sonja as the sixth entry on the program came into view. It was on the acrobatic side and interesting, even tho some old Henie show fans might have had trouble believing their eyes as they watched Mary Ann Kramer, Jimmy Caesar, and Charles Hadlett trio hopping over big silver globes, etc.

Ah! Sonja Appears at Last!

Then Miss Henie came to work—beautifully, eagerly, and thoroly. In "Gay Parisienne," her opening vehicle, Sonja appeared with Mr. Turner in two evolutions, and again with Mr. Turner and Fritz Dietl.

Following this performance debut by Miss Henie with the ensemble, were three fine numbers by her cast, then the Hawaiian first act finale.

We can recall no ice revue creation more colorful than "Isle of the Trade Winds." This Hawaiian innovation by Miss Henie and the entire company, you'll want to go back and see this one again—not only Sonja's hula to the Ulili chant, but all the attendant artistry as well.

Young Mr. Turner Returns.

"Two Tone Rhythm" got the second act under way, followed by "Three Blue Notes," same being the Misses Helga and Inga Brandt and Peter Killam. Then Fritz Dietl did his familiar stilt number. Miss Henie's first appearance in the second act was in one of her most famous ballets, Clair de Lune, the music by Claude De Bussy, you know.

Two places later on the program Miss Henie and Mr. Turner did the Tango, in which she has appeared here with other partners, but never to better advantage than with Mr. Turner.

Brightening Chicago's Christmas

Jimmy Owns a Net Title, but There Is No Place to Defend It

BY WILLIAM FAY.

This is a Christmas story without a moral and with virtually no ending. However, it has a beginning. It begins with Jimmy Evert, the Senn High school graduate now a Notre Dame freshman.

Last Christmas [1940] Jimmy won the national junior indoor tennis tournament. That is quite an honor—an honor which Jimmy had every intention of defending this Christmas.

He mentioned to Prof. Walter Langford, the Notre Dame tennis coach, that he'd like to represent Notre Dame at the tournament. Coach Langford then took the matter up with Mr. Herb Jones, who is Notre Dame's business manager of athletics.

It's Arranged for Jimmy.

Mr. Jones looked into the Notre Dame athletic code and found a rule which stated no freshman could represent the university in intercollegiate competition.

Coach Langford agreed the rule was there, all right, but he pointed out that the national tennis tournament did not exactly come under the heading of intercollegiate competition.

That was so, Mr. Jones agreed, but, to make everything legal, he determined to have the faculty board in control of athletics rule on the advisability of sending Freshman James Evert to the national tournament at Camden, N. J. The board met and gave official sanction to the project.

Whereupon Mr. Evert got down to the serious business of getting in shape for his title defense. He came into Chicago on weekends to practice. He spent three days practicing with Bobby Riggs, the same Riggs who makes his pro debut against Fred Perry tonight.

Entered Ten Days Ago.

About ten days ago Jimmy sent his entry to the Middle States Tennis association which last year conducted the indoor meet. Bob Smidl, another Chicago junior who teamed with Jim to win the national doubles at Culver Military academy last summer, also dispatched his entry. Jim and Bob planned to add the indoor crown to their outdoor title.

They planned to leave for Camden Christmas morning, arriving just in time to start play in the tournament which has begun on Dec. 26 for years and years.

But no verification of their entry arrived. Finally, on Christmas eve, Smidl wired the Middle States association. "Have you received entries for tournament?"

More and More Mystery.

Puzzled, Smidl and Evert began phoning Chicago tennis officials, asking the whereabouts of the 1941 tournament. The officials didn't know.

Finally, at 6 o'clock last night, Evert phoned the Tribune sports department. Was there a junior tennis tournament going on anywhere? He wanted to know. He was the defending champion and he wanted to play in the tournament.

THE TRIBUNE queried its New York correspondent. At 10 p. m. the New York correspondent located John A. Ortgies, field secretary of the United States Lawn Tennis association. Mr. Ortgies told the correspondent the tournament had been canceled. When? Mr. Ortgies didn't know when. Why? Mr. Ortgies didn't know why either.

Does Anybody Know Why?

At 11 p. m. THE TRIBUNE phoned the Messrs. Evert and Smidl and told them to unpack their rackets. They weren't going to play in any tournament. There wasn't any tournament.

Moral? There isn't any moral to this Christmas story. Ending? There's virtually no ending. Mr. Evert just said good night.

REDS' FIELDING MARK OF .975 SETS N. L. PACE

McCormick Is Best First Sacker 3d Year in Row.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[AVERAGES ON PAGE 19.]

If Bill McKechnie's Reds could have included a little hitting in their 1941 labors all might have been different in the National league pennant race. The Cincinnati pitching staff didn't take a back seat for anybody. Now come the official fielding averages for the recent season and the various tabulations show that in the field the Reds were the friskiest of the circuit. But for some mysterious reason they coudn't hit and thru this leak their chances for a third straight pennant escaped.

The Reds carried away the team fielding honors with a mark of .975 and heavy contributions to this percentage came from various sources. Their first baseman, Frank McCormick, was tops in his position for the third consecutive year with a .995 average. Their second baseman, Linus Frey, also was the leader in his particular line of baseball endeavor. Of course, their catcher, Ernie Lombardi, committed 16 passed balls, leading in this for the seventh consecutive year, but they don't count in the percentage.

Braves Have Three Top Men.

The Boston Braves had top men in three positions, but this didn't do them much good either in the standings of the teams or in aggregate club fielding. Ray Berres was the most consistent among the catchers, shading Brooklyn's Mickey Owen by a slim margin. For the second straight year Eddie Miller was the kingpin among the shortstops. And if baseball is a young man's game what is to be done about the forty year old Johnny Cooney, who was No. 1 in the fly chasing department?

It is so seldom that the Phillies sneak in on anything that the case of Merrill May, their third baseman, warrants mention. He not only was the league's best at the hot corner but also the busiest. In 140 games he handled 518 chances successfully. Compare this to Stan Hack's 433 chances handled and you conclude either May is a wonder or that the Cub veteran has slowed down considerably.

Cubs Fifth in Fielding.

The Cubs as a team were fifth in fielding and you'd never guess where some of the help came from. None other than Lou Novikoff, who can hardly be charged with being a skilled fielder, had a perfect percentage in 54 games, which was all he had time for what with his summer's sentence to Milwaukee. The Cubs had the fewest assists of any team in the league, an indication that the infielders weren't especially shifty and that the outfielders weren't good at throwing.

Al Lopez of the Pirates went thru the season without being charged with a passed ball in 114 games. Al Todd did the same in 128 games with the Pirates in 1937. In the catching line old Gabby Hartnett also did a little more work. He caught 34 games for the Giants, raising his lifetime total to 1790.

TRAVIS DRAFTED FOR ARMY; WILL REPORT JAN. 7

Riverdale, Ga., Dec. 25—(AP)—Cecil Travis, Washington infielder whose .359 batting average was second only to Ted Williams of Boston in the American league last season, has been drafted for military service.

He said tonight he will report Jan. 7 for induction at Fort McPherson in Atlanta.

Travis, who has played shortstop and third base with Washington since he went up from Chattanooga in 1932, was 28 years old last Aug. 8. He is single.

Travis was to have been drafted last summer, but at that time received a 60 day deferment. When the time had expired, he had reached his 28th birthday and his draft board took no further action.

New York, Dec. 25 [Special].—A lot of things happened to the Blackhawks this Christmas night, none of them calculated to make their memory of the holiday a happy one. In the first place, the Rangers won, 5 to 2, after spotting the Chicagoans a two-goal lead; secondly, the defeat elevated the New Yorkers to third place in the National Hockey league, ahead of their victims, and thirdly, the setback was the second the Hawks have suffered on Garden ice in three nights. The Brooklyn Americans humbled them, 4 to 3, Tuesday night.

Thirteen thousand one hundred twenty-six fans saw the battle, which was featured by 60 minutes of penalty-free action. It is a rare occurrence, indeed, when no penalties are imposed in a contest which produces as many as seven goals.

New Ranger Line Functions.

The new line sent out by New York, comprising Alan Kuntz, brought up from New Haven, at left wing; Center Clint Smith, and Right Winger Grant Warwick, was a success. Each accounted for a goal, the other New York scores going to Lynn Patrick, his 12th of the season, and Mac Colville.

The Rangers, with 72 straight games in which they have not failed to score, are approaching their own mark of 77, established in 1931 and 1932.

Allen Gets Other Goal.

George Allen fired one in early in the second period to give Chicago its two-goal margin and then the Rangers went to work, Patrick, Warwick, and M. Colville coming thru with the scores needed for victory. Kuntz and Smith were the sharpshooters in the third period.

The Blackhawks' next game will be in Montreal on Tuesday. They will return home then to battle the Detroit Red Wings in the Stadium New Year's night.

FOOTBALL TEAM SEES WAR START, DOESN'T KNOW IT

San José, Cal., Dec. 25 (AP).—San José State football players, marooned in Hawaii by the war, said on arriving home today they were eating breakfast at a hotel when the Japanese planes began the unexpected attack.

One player looked out the dining room window and saw a splash in the ocean.

"What's that out there?" he asked a waiter.

"O, that's just a whale spouting," the waiter replied.

The players saw planes flying around and observed what appeared to be dogfights high in the sky, but admitted they did not realize what was happening until they read the papers that afternoon.

SAVOY TO FIGHT MADISON'S TEAM IN LEAGUE MATCH

Clash Tonight in Arena on West Side.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Savoy Athletic club boxers will meet a Madison A. C. team in a Chicagoland Amateur Boxing league match tonight in Madison arena, 4711 Madison street. Every bout on the program promises to produce its quota of bristling action and any one of them might steal the show. Yet there are two contests which stand out.

One of these encounters will bring together Jimmy Baratta, Madison club, and William Jordan of Savoy. The other will involve Pat Maloney, also of the Madison squad, and Jesse Walker, teammate of Jordan's. All are welterweights and have met before in nonleague competition.

Walker Won First.

Walker scored a decision in five rounds over Maloney a week ago, while Baratta conquered Jordan, also in five rounds, last October. Maloney is confident of winning this time, but Jesse has other ideas. Altho Jordan gave him a difficult fight in their previous engagement, Jimmy believes he can make it two in a row over his rival from the south side.

Baratta will be in quest of his fifth straight league victory. His previous victims were Joe Manjarrez, Ashland A. C.; Ralph Balbirnie, Illinois A. C.; Jack McClintock, Fort Sheridan, and Al Reasoner, Catholic Youth organization. Despite these points, Jimmy's team is resting in last place in the league standings.

This is because the Madison club has been unable to score a team victory in four starts. After losing to the CYO, 5 to 3, the west side representatives held Fort Sheridan and IAC to draw decisions and than lost to Ashland A. C., 5 to 2.

Can Tie for Fifth.

If successful this evening, the Madison delegation will gain a share of fifth place with West Suburban club and Milwaukee.

At the same time the Savoy club, which has registered two triumphs and one tie and suffered one setback in four earlier appearances, will be pushed from third to fourth position. Pairings:

118 pounds—Robert Jones, Savoy, vs. Johnny Mezzano, Madison A. C.

135 pounds—Charles Rogers, Savoy, vs. Lou Leonetti, Madison A. C.

147 pounds—Howard Jackson, Savoy, vs. Lenny Marino, Madison A. C.

147 pounds—Jesse Walker, Savoy, vs. Pat Maloney, Madison A. C.

145 pounds—William Jordan, Savoy, vs. Jimmy Baratta, Madison A. C.

160 pounds—James Williams, Savoy, vs. Matt Slobodnik, Madison A. C.

CHAMPIONS LEAVE TODAY

The Rovicks will open their schedule in Chattanooga, Tenn., tomorrow night with an exhibition at a recreation center there. They will meet a men's team in Birmingham, Ala. Sunday night, then will encounter the Sunshine Center five of St. Petersburg Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

They will be guests at Tropical Park race track in Miami next Friday, then will return by way of Orlando and Jacksonville, Fla., Lexington, Ky., Cincinnati, O., and Indianapolis, making appearances in Orlando, Jacksonville, Cincinnati, and Indianapolis. They return to Chicago Jan. 12.

Three Veterans Make Trip.

The Rovicks won their title at the Women's International Bowling congress in Los Angeles last spring, rolling a 2,661 score to win by 18 pins. They succeeded the Logan Square Buicks, also of Chicago, as champions.

Three members of the team that took the title are to make the trip south. They are Capt. Nell Hartmann, Laila Gierman, and Margaret Frank.

7,500 Attend Reopening at Fair Grounds

Edward J. Brennan, secretary of racing, said he was well pleased with the crowd, altho it was smaller than on many opening days in the past. He blamed the weather.

J. W. Bell's Steel Heels, with Jockey Jimmy George up, came home four lengths in front of the field in the Pontchartrain handicap, the $2,500 added feature of the day.

Close to Track Record.

The favorite made his move entering the stretch and finished the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:44 3-5, two-fifths of a second off the track record. He paid $4.40 for $2 mutuel tickets. Second was John L. Sullivan's Airmaster, paying $10.80 to place, and third was Mrs. Emil E. Denemark's Idle Sun, paying $3.80.

Approximately 1,400 horses were on hand or en route from the California tracks as the 42-day meet opened under the Fair Grounds Breeders and Racing association. That organization saved the fair grounds from being cut up into a residential district when the old Louisiana Jockey club abandoned the sport following a controversy over the newly formed racing commission's ruling eliminating the "morning line" bookmaking.

THE CHIEF WINS

Miami, Fla., Dec. 25 (AP).—The Chief, owned by Maxwell Howard, equaled Ringle's Tropical Park record today by speeding to victory in the mile and 70 yard Christmas handicap in 1:41.5.

The 6 year old gelding finished a length and a half on top in the field of seven and rewarded his backers with $13.80, $6.60 and $4.40 for $2 across the board. He was ridden by Jockey Jimmy Stout, and took down $1,600 of the $2,500 purse.

The Chaswil stable's Benefactor was an easy second, four lengths ahead of Mrs. L. Lazare's fancied City Talk. Benefactor paid $5.30 and $3.80 and City Talk $3.40.

Handiboy Runs Out.

Mrs. A. R. Smith's Victory Bound, at $35.50, $16.40 and $7.10, was the best long shot winner on the program. Victory Bound led the field in by three lengths in the fourth, beating off Commixion's late bid. Commixion returned $18.10 and $8.60 and the show horse, Briar Sharp, $5.80.

The favored Handiboy ruined his chances by running out at the final turn.

Despite a bright, warm day, the crowd of 9,513 was 2,113 short of the attendance last Christmas.

MICHIGAN STATE ALTERS COURSES TO AID DEFENSE

Physical Education Work May Be Expanded.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 25.—Michigan State college, one of the land grant schools that has always coöperated enthusiastically with the Reserve Officers Training Corps program of the United States, is the first great midwestern school to revise its curriculum for the interests of its men who may enter Uncle Sam's service shortly after becoming 20 years of age.

Other universities have made plans, of course, and the tentative outline in several instances has been announced. But here at Michigan State a two year course leading to an associate degree [the exact name has not been decided upon] goes into effect Jan. 7. The state college also plans a more thoro physical education program, and the extensive facilities of the college will be used for civilian physical education and defense courses. Michigan State, by the action of the Michigan state board of agriculture, the controling body, has inaugurated a plan that many other universities undoubtedly will emulate.

Air Service Gets 416.

The intercollegiate program for sports will be continued. Michigan State freshmen now are required to take physical education three hours a week and the male students are enrolled in the ROTC during their freshman and sophomore years for three hours' study each week. Michigan State's enrollment has more than doubled in the last decade and today there are 4,200 men in the student body of 6,300. Four hundred and sixteen have been recruited for the air service in recent weeks.

Ralph Young, director of athletics, does not anticipate any immediate change in the intercollegiate sports program. Obviously if any change is made it probably will be an extension of the physical education courses to upper classes. Since the average age for third year students is 21, Michigan State has arranged to give the greatest possible scholastic benefit in the freshman and sophomore years.

May Waive Frosh Rule.

It has been pointed out that colleges eventually may waive the current rule that prohibits intercollegiate competition until after one year in residence and passing grades for this period. The Central Collegiate conference, of which Michigan State is a member, enforces this rule, which is germane to the restrictions of the Western conference. President John A. Hannah of Michigan State says incisively that the college now follows the Big Ten in all eligibility rules and will follow that organization in event of changes during the war period.

The opinion of President Hannah is that the government will not make any changes in the ROTC setup. In 1918 the Students Army Training corps, leading to officers' training, was organized and the government divided the time between military drills and the scholastic courses. The ROTC has produced 10,000 reserve officers each year, many of whom now are on active duty. At Michigan State there are 600 applicants for the 300 places in the ROTC program for the junior and senior years leading to a reserve commission.

Cut Course to 3 Years.

The simplest curricular change at Michigan State is expansion of the summer session to a full quarter. The college now will offer four 12 week quarters each year and by skipping vacations a student may graduate in three years. June high school graduates may enter the summer quarter. Most difficult is the decision to offer a complete, rounded, two year course leading to the associate degree. This requires regrouping of the entire curriculum. This wartime program will be arranged so that a student finishing his military service may return and in two more years complete work for a bachelor's degree.

All students will be urged to take special extra curricular courses in civilian defense. These will include training in first aid, acting as air raid wardens, fire control, auxiliary police duty [Michigan State now offers a course in police administration], and other civilian defense courses sponsored by the state defense council.

Plans Enlistment Office.

Michigan State also will maintain a central enlistment office on the campus at which full information about the army, navy, marine and air services will be kept up to date. Students with special interests or abilities will be advised about enlistment problems and facilities will be provided for recruiting groups visiting the campus.

Pro All-Stars Limber Up; Go to Work Today

New York, Dec. 25 [Special].—Steve Owen, ordinarily coach of the New York Giants and at the moment director of the National Football league All-Stars, gave a little ground to Christmas today, but didn't yield all the way. Fifteen of the men chosen for the game with the champion Chicago Bears at the Polo Grounds on Jan. 4 spent about an hour on the field.

Owen did not devise an organized attack or defense and didn't try to put a team together. Most of those who have reported so far are linemen and the coach conducted only running and conditioning work. After the men returned to the showers he used the blackboard for a while.

Go to Work Today.

"We'll really go to work tomorrow," said Steve. "I expect all of the gang to be in by Saturday.

"We'll work mainly on the type of football the Giants have been playing, of course, but don't expect that in a little more than a week we can put together a team like a team that has been in action as a unit all year.

"To a great extent it will be a team of individuals, but they are all real football players and they will turn in real football. Yes, we expect to put on as many pass plays as we can. We'll have some great passers and receivers, and I think—I know—we'll score on them. Ours will be a good defensive team.

Plan Double Daily Drills.

"The field is in good shape and we will see to it that it stays that way. If we get a break from the weather I think New Yorkers will have quite a show. They'll see those Bears in action and they'll see us make it interesting for them. The reports I have from the men chosen are that they are in shape, and we'll have double practice sessions next week thru Friday, I expect."

Among those who joined the squad today were Joe Kuharich, Chicago Cardinal guard, and Jim Sivell, Brooklyn Dodger guard.

INDIANAPOLIS SIX ENDS BUFFALO'S STREAK, 3 TO 2

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 25 (AP).—The Indianapolis Capitals broke Buffalo's unbeaten home streak of eight games tonight, defeating the Bisons, 3 to 2, in an American Hockey league contest before 6,414 fans.

As Art Simmons drove home a shot from the blue line in the third period for Buffalo's second goal the Capitals swarmed around the officials in protest. Linesman Tiny Teasdale dropped Joe Fisher with a right when, the official charged, the Capital forward used abusive language.

Fisher opened the scoring for the Capitals, converting Adam Brown's rebound in front of the Buffalo cage late in the first period.

After Max Bennett took Dede Klein's cross rink pass to tie early in the second period, Indianapolis came back with two goals, Jack Keating and Adam Brown counting within two minutes of each other.

TEXAS PLAYERS SIGN FOR GAME SET FOR CHICAGO

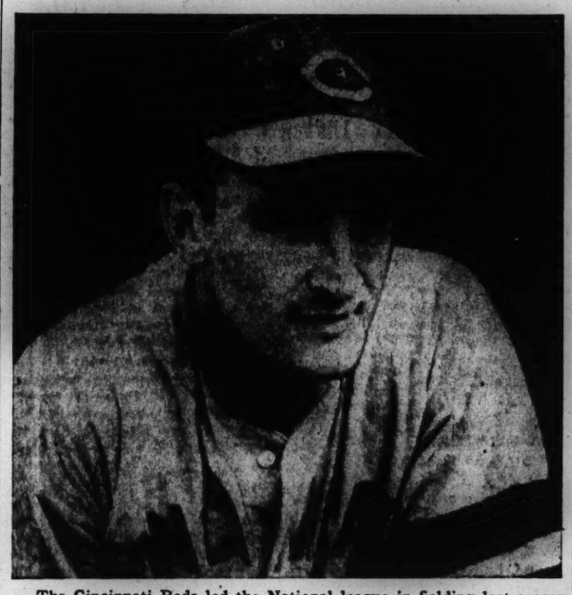
Amarillo, Tex., Dec. 25 (AP).—Two University of Texas senior football players said in a radio interview today that plans were under way for players of the Texas and Minnesota teams who had finished their college eligibility to play in Chicago's Soldiers' field Jan. 10. They did not say who was promoting the game.

Vernon Martin, back, and Mike Sweeney, end, said they had signed contracts to play in a game which would pit players from Texas and Minnesota against each other, with the remainder of the squads to be made up of Southwest and Western conference players who also had finished their college football careers.

ORIOLES BEAT ROVERS.

New York, Dec. 25 (AP).—An overtime goal by Ducky Skinner gave the Baltimore Orioles an 8 to 7 victory over the New York Rovers in an Eastern Amateur Hockey league game today.

Still League's Best Fielder



The Cincinnati Reds led the National league in fielding last season and Frank McCormick, husky first baseman, is one of the reasons. For the third straight season Frank, or Moose, as his mates call him, was the best fielding first baseman in the circuit with a .995 average. The official figures were released yesterday.

Tourney Facts

OPENING GAMES.
7 p. m.—St. Philip vs. Holy Trinity.
8 p. m.—St. George vs. St. Gregory.
9 p. m.—Fenwick vs. De Paul.
10 p. m.—St. Patrick vs. St. Ignatius.

Chicago's Catholic and Public School league basketball teams will end preparations for their championship campaigns by participating in two holiday tournaments—Fenwick's junior meet opening tonight in Oak Park, and the University of Chicago marathon, which begins tomorrow in the Midway fieldhouse.

Four games will be held on the first night's competition in Fenwick High gymnasium. The opener will bring together St. Philip and Holy Trinity at 7 o'clock. Approximately an hour later St. George and St. Gregory will follow. Fenwick will oppose De Paul at 9 o'clock and St. Patrick plays St. Ignatius in the concluding contest on the schedule.

Leo Gets Rest.

Leo's Lions, defending champions, will be given an additional 24 hours to recuperate from their Christmas dinners, and will make their first appearance in the meet tomorrow night at 9 o'clock against St. Michael.

Babe Baranowski, the Lions' football and basketball star, who last Tuesday led the senior squad to the St. George championship, may join the juniors and help them extend their winning streak of 42 games.

The curtain raiser in the Stagg tournament will be played by Lake View and Parker at 1 o'clock tomorrow. There will be seven other games, the evening's program being headlined by Du Sable's defending champions against Kelvyn Park at 7 o'clock.

Could Set Record.

If the towering colored quintet succeeds in winning its second straight title it will be the first time this feat has been accomplished since the tournament was limited to city high schools in 1935.

There will be no competition Sunday, but first round play will be resumed Monday and continue Tuesday. The second round games will be played Wednesday. The quarterfinals are scheduled New Year's day, the semi-finals on Friday night and the finals Saturday afternoon.

In leading Loyola to its six victories in seven games so far, Mickey has scored 44 field goals and fourteen free throws for a total of 102 points. Versatility of the Loyola attack, however, is shown in the leading Chicagoan scorer for the past three games. Rottner led the team against Washington in Chicago while Forward Jack Dwan accounted for 13 points in the return game in St. Louis. Last Monday it was Guard Bob Tietz who collected 12 points while Mickey was close behind with 11. Tomorrow's lineup:

2 BILLION SLASH SOUGHT IN U. S. RUNNING COSTS

Committee Favors Farm Aid Cut.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25—Warning that the more than 75 billion dollars thus far authorized is only the beginning of the cost of a long, hard war, the joint committee on the reduction of non-essential federal expenditures today issued a preliminary report recommending savings of approximately 1 billion, 716 million dollars in the next fiscal year.

Actually, the war expenditures program totals 78 billion, 212 million dollars to date, including 3 billions in foreign orders, according to the OPM's bureau of research and statistics. Total government obligations up to Nov. 30, a week before war broke out, were 47 billion, 726 million dollars. Of this, 13 billion, 299 millions had been paid out.

The joint committee, composed of ranking members of the taxing and spending committees of congress, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., and Director of the Budget Harold D. Smith, was established pursuant to the revenue act of 1941, which directed it to make recommendations for the elimination of all non-essential expenditures. The preliminary report was released by Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), chairman of the joint committee.

Morgenthau Would Go Further.

Budget Director Smith refused to sign the committee's report because of his "official participation in the preparation of the President's forthcoming 1943 budget, to be submitted Jan. 3," which, he wrote, "may contain recommendations at variance" with the committee proposals.

Secretary Morgenthau, however, not only signed the report but recommended much more drastic slashes in appropriations for agriculture. Morgenthau said the department of agriculture should be required to operate with an annual appropritaion of $500,000,000 less than the current total of 1 billion 195 million dollars, exclusive of loan authorizations.

"It is estimated," Morgenthau wrote, "that in 1941 the farmers' share of the national income will be 20 per cent greater than in 1932, notwithstanding a reduction of almost 10 per cent in the proportion of the farm population to the total population of the country.

Says Farmer Has Enough.

"Altho governmental aid was necessary in order to bring the farmers' net income from 3¼ billion dollars in 1932 up to 8½ billion dollars or more in 1941, certainly after having reached this goal there does not appear to be any reason to continue spending at the same rate. The farmer is getting his share of the total expenditures made by the government, as the increase in his net income indicates. In addition, there are substantial benefits that will accrue to the farmer from the lend-lease program.

"In view of all these circumstances I feel at this time that we should make drastic cuts in our agricultural expenditures and I would recommend that the secretary of agriculture be required to operate the agricultural program included in the budget with an annual appropriation of $500,000,000 less than authorized for the current fiscal year."

Suggested Savings.

The committee report recommends savings by the department of agriculture aggregating $230,622,000 in cash appropriations and $170,000,000 in loan authorizations, as follows:

Deferment of land purchases	$ 3,000,000
Savings in overhead expenses.	50,000,000
Reduction in subsidies for exportation and domestic consumption of agricultural commodities	100,000,000
Farm tenant program abolished [cash]	7,122,000
Farm tenant program abolished [loans]	50,000,000
Farm Security administration abolished [loans]	120,000,000

In connection with its recommendations for the elimination of all unnecessary overhead expenditures, the report directs particular attention to "the wages and overhead incident to the employment of nearly 100,000 AAA committeemen."

Nye Protests Cuts.

Sen. Gerald P. Nye [R., N. D.], ranking minority member of the senate appropriations committee, protested that "we must keep agriculture strong and ready for the adjustment that must follow the war." Rep. Clarence Cannon [D., Mo.], chairman of the house appropriations committee and one of the leading exponents of bigger and better farm subsidies, was out of town when the report was signed.

Other recommendations of the committee, together with the estimated savings, follow:

Abolition of the National Youth administration	91,767,000
Reduction of Work Projects administration appropriations to a maximum of $50,000,000 a month and further reductions as employment increases	400,000,000
One-half curtailment of public roads program	64,000,000
Deferment of nondefense public buildings	43,164,000
Deferment of irrigation, reclamation and other interior department projects	26,727,000
Deferment of rivers and harbors and flood control items.	27,835,000

2 Billion Saving Is Goal.

These recommendations would effect cash savings of 1 billion 13 million dollars and savings in loan authorizations of 170 million dollars. In addition, the report recommends that $415,980,061 in funds impounded by the director of the budget from current appropriations as reserves to meet unforeseen contingencies be covered into the treasury by legislative action.

Chairman Byrd expressed the hope that further studies and subsequent recommendations would point out additional savings to raise the total to 2 billion dollars a year.

The committee report insisted that all nonessential spending must yield to the war effort.

"We started this war with a direct federal indebtedness of about 55 billion dollars," it said.

"Only the Beginning."

"Today the ultimate cost of the war is unpredictable, but to date we have appropriated and authorized 75 billion dollars for national defense. This is only the beginning.

"Judged by national income, estimated at 105 billion dollars, 1942 will be the most prosperous year in American history. This may be compared with the national income of approximately 82 billion dollars in 1929. That is one reason to believe much of the relief expenditure continued from the so-called depression years now can be eliminated. Continuation of public works and some other types of projects during the war emergency would require diversion of vital man power and materials from defense to nondefense projects."

PREDICT ARMY'S EARLY RELEASE OF PLANE PLANT

Bendix, N. J., Dec. 25 [Special].—Early resumption of private control of the army-operated plant of Air Associates, Inc., was predicted tonight after representatives of the management and the United Automobile Workers [CIO] agreed on terms of a one year contract.

Wage increases and a modified union shop are provided in the agreement which is subject to ratification by the union membership and directors of the corporation.

The army air corps, which has been in command of the plant since Oct. 31, plans to relinquish control when the contract is signed. Union officials expressed certainty that the agreement would be approved at meetings of members tomorrow. It was hoped the contract would be signed by the union and the corporation by Monday.

Provides Blanket Increase.

The contract calls for blanket wage increases of 10 cents an hour for the 800 production employés. The minimum hourly wage for men will be 75 cents and for women 60 cents. Union officials said the present minimum for men and women was 40 cents. The UAW did not win its full demand for a union shop, but will get something in the character of a "maintenance of membership" clause if the agreement is ratified. The pay increases would be retroactive to Dec. 15.

Seized After Long Strife.

President Roosevelt commandeered the Air Associates plant after five months of strife between the management and the CIO had disrupted production on 5 million dollars in orders for airplane parts. The President charged the management was reluctant to carry out a national defense mediation board recommendation for reinstatement of strikers.

Contract negotiations were initiated after E. Leroy Hill had been ousted as president of the company.

SMALL BUSINESS UNIT CREATED BY FEDERAL AGENCY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones announced today that a small business unit had been set up in the department of commerce to cope with problems facing small concerns in wartime. It will be headed by Willian Sheperdson of New York, former management consultant for manufacturers and distributors.

The announcement said:

"Up to the present the most pressing problems of the small manufacturers have derived from their inability to get defense contracts or to convert to defense production. Under the war economy it is expected that there will be increasing problems in the distributive trades due to shortages of goods to sell, and later, problems of labor shortages in all classes.

"It is to cope with these future developments that the small business unit was created."

Robert V. Rasmussen.

Rasmussen for the last three years has been in charge of the company's northwest activities with headquarters in Minneapolis. Arthur Nansen succeeds Rasmussen at Minneapolis.

INSURANCE FIRM MAKES PLEDGE TO BUY U.S. BONDS

The Continental Assurance company, Chicago, announced yesterday that in 1942, or until further notice, it will invest at least 75 per cent of the increase in the company's invested assets in government obligations.

"The executive committee understands that these instructions will involve a considerable sacrifice of interest earnings on a large portion of the company's new funds," W. E. White, vice president, said. "On the other hand it belives that it is the responsibility of the company to support our government in every conceivable manner in this emergency."

The new policy, White said, assumes that present conditions will continue during the year.

BENDIX INCOME BREAKS RECORD; TAX BILL SOARS

Year's Profit Rises to $6.30 a Share.

Despite a federal tax bill 5½ times larger than in the preceding year, net income of the Bendix Aviation corporation, South Bend, Ind., increased 78 per cent in the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, to the highest level in the corporation's history. All phases of its operations were expanded to meet demands of the arms effort, Vincent Bendix, president of the corporation, told share holders in his annual report yesterday.

Consolidated net earnings were $13,267,988, equal to $6.30 a share, against $7,861,371, or $3.75 a share, in the preceding year.

Company's Tax Bill Soars.

Provision for federal taxes, which totaled $4,268,718 a year before, soared to $23,446,491, almost twice net income. The total of all taxes was $27,670,104, or 368 per cent more than the $5,903,713 of the preceding year.

Under the stimulus of huge arms orders, Bendix sales increased 163 per cent to $156,596,198, achieving an all-time record for the third consecutive year. The backlog of orders on Sept. 30 was about 350 million dollars, compared with $73,822,000 a year ago, and has increased substantially since, the president reported.

The company reported the addition of 268 new subcontractors on arms orders, bringing the total to about 300. Their facilities contributed 35 per cent of the increased armament production during the year, Bendix said.

Employment Gains 117 Per Cent.

Employment during the year jumped 117 per cent to 34,125, plant floor space increased 86 per cent to 4,525,165 square feet and replacement value of facilities owned and leased increased 120 per cent to $56,393,223.

Bendix said the corporation's wage bill averaged 48 per cent higher than at the start of the war in September, 1939. Facilities of the company, which normally produces aircraft and automotive parts, have been converted in large part to production of these and similar items entirely for defense.

HIGHER WAGES, TAXES REDUCE SANTA FE PROFIT

Higher federal taxes and wage increases retroactive to September cut sharply into the Santa Fe railroad's net operating income for November and the first 11 months of the year, the road reported yesterday.

The road had net operating income of $2,877,585 in November, compared with $2,834,965 in the 1940 month. Federal income taxes totaled $802,000, against $380,000 a year ago.

Net operating income in the 11 months totaled $36,323,094, against $20,585,958 last year. Federal income taxes in the period amounted to $10,495,000, against $2,625,000.

The Chicago Great Western reported November net income of $144,713, against $201,015 a year before. For the 11 months ended Nov. 30 the company earned $1,634,914, against a net loss of $179,151 in the first 11 months of 1940.

CAPITAL PROVISIONS.

What are the income tax provisions governing capital gains and losses in a joint return filed by husband and wife? What are the provisions applying to a partnership?—L. J. B.

Answer: When reporting capital gains and losses in a joint return husband and wife become, in effect, a single taxpayer. Their net short term or long term gains are added to their combined taxable income or total tax according to the methods permitted by law. Capital losses of one spouse may be deducted from the capital gains of the other. Thus, if the husband had a net short term gain and the wife a net short term loss, the loss could be used to offset the gain. The same applies to long term gains and losses and if the offset results in a net long term loss, this loss could be deducted from the combined taxable income or total tax in the amount allowed.

Each partner must include in his personal income tax return his share of the partnership's short term apd long term capital net gains or losses. For example, if the partnership has a net short term loss, each partner should deduct his portion of the loss from any personal short term gain he might have. A loss incurred by a partner upon withdrawal from the partnership has been held to be a capital loss.

RUBBER SHOES.

May I have a report on the Converse Rubber company, formerly the Converse Rubber Shoe company? I have a $500 bond, but have received nothing on it for some time—A. M. S.

Answer: The Converse Rubber company succeeded the Converse Rubber Shoe company thru reorganization in 1929. The company manufactures rubber boots and shoes. Plant and offices are in Malden, Mass.

The bond you hold was probably issued by the predecessor company since the successor corporation has no bonds outstanding. Under the reorganization, bond and noteholders and other creditors of the old company received 26 cents on the dollar, or one share of $33 par preferred and one no par common share for each $100 of claims. The reorganized company was in receivership from June, 1932, to April, 1933.

Capitalization consists of 17,577 shares of 60 cent cumulative special preferred, 17,742 shares of the $33 preferred, $2 cumulative, and 59,998 shares of common stock. No dividends have been paid in recent years. There are also outstanding mortgage notes in the amount of $102,420.

For the fiscal year ended Feb. 1, 1941, net profit was $16,978, compared with $2,775 in 1940. There was a loss in 1938. At the end of the 1941 fiscal year assets totaled $1,590,900 and net working capital was $540,689. Converse Rubber has received government orders, including one of $141,410 for flying shoes.
